Route 23/30

Lancaster Officials Press For Immediate Construction

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER — James G. Huber, chairman of the Lancaster County Commissioners, called for the immediate construction to begin on the Route 23 bypass and development of plans for a road to alleviate Route 30 traffic congestion.

Huber, representing the county's commissioners, issued a unified consensus position for the group on the Route 23/30 dilemma that has concerned people in the county and state level for some time at a Thursday afternoon press conference. The conference, originally slated for Friday, was moved up partially in response to statements made Wednesday by the Casey administration.

Transportation Secretary Howard Yerusalem said that the state expects to begin construction on the Route 23 "goat path" by the Fall of 1990 and continue studying the feasibility of a combined Route 23/30 project.

In addition, Governor Robert P. Casey was adamantly against constructing a new highway that would bisect the Amish community or disrupt their lifestyle. Last

The snow and cold weather this week caused drifting over roads and frozen water pipes around the farm. But this pretty picture of the snake fence along Queen Road north of Paradise created shadow patterns in the snow.

20 Back Mountain Barn Fires Have Farmers Reeling

BY BARBARA MILLER
Lycoming Co. Correspondent

DALLAS — Sleep comes hard if you're a farmer in the Back Mountain area of Luzerne County these days. Farmers' nights there are split into two halves, one part spent patrolling the barn and outbuildings, and the other trying to get some sleep while remaining alert enough to hear Rover if he barks.

Most feel the loss of sleep is preferable to the loss of a barn.

But after a while the nagging fear, lack of rest, and the unfairness of the situation gel into feelings of anger and frustration.

"I hope to God they get that devil. I sleep with one eye open and with my gun on the other bed," says one Back Mountain farmer.

He is among the fortunate. His barn is still standing.

Since last May there have been 20 arson fires in the Back Mountain area causing property damages in excess of $700,000. Of those 20 structures, 16 were barns, often owned by other citizens and in close proximity to a road. Most occurred in the wee hours of the weekend mornings, and sometimes as many as five structures were torched in less than an hour. To date, loss of life attributed to the blazes stands at nine cows and four dogs.

Sands Fire

Seventy-three-year-old Ralph Sands, a prominent Luzerne County dairy farmer recently elected to the Pennsylvania Holstein Hall of Fame, was one who suffered heavy losses in the most recent arson fires.

One of four buildings burned the morning of December 12, the Posters such as the above offering a reward of $7,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the arsonist are being distributed in the Back Mountain area by a concerned group of citizens.

Milk Producers May Receive $1-Premium

BY PAT PURCELL

COCHRANVILLE (CHESTER CO.) — Atlantic Dairy Coop producers in the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency (MACMMA) area may receive $1.00 per hundredweight premium on Class I milk or 50 cents for all milk by May or June, if dealers continue to respond favorably to recommendations from MACMA, according to Robert B. McSparran, President of MACMMA and of Atlantic Dairy Cooperative.

Speaking to nearly 100 coop members from the Cochranville and Oxford locals at their annual dinner meeting, January 21, McSparran, stressed the "if" in that statement.

"Dealers have responded favor-

Trunkenmillers Achieve Equal Yields By Using Manure

SUNBURY (Northumberland Co.) — Robert and Gary Trunkenmiller on their dairy farm in Delaware Township, during the past growing season, established six nutrient demonstration plots on one of their corn fields and experimented with different rates of manure and fertilizer application.

The experiments were done in cooperation with the Northumberland County Conservation District, Cooperative Extension Service, and the Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Program.

The purpose of the project was threefold:

(1) Demonstrate that the application of nutrients in excess of plant requirements does not increase crop yields.

(2) Demonstrate that manure analysis and soils testing are valuable and reliable tools in developing a systematic approach to manure and fertilizer application.

(3) Demonstrate that significant financial savings can result from scaling back fertilizer application rates in accordance with manure analysis and soil test results.

Manure Testing Is Accurate

From the results, it appears that manure testing produces a relatively reliable estimate of nutrient levels in manure. Farmers who do not scale back their fertilizer application rates on fields that receive

FUTURES MARKET TRENDS GRAIN AND LIVESTOCK

This market information provided by ACRES. ACRES is a copyrighted market information service developed by the American Farm Bureau and available to Pennsylvania farmers on a daily basis through Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Farm Management Services For additional market comments and trading service contact PFA Commodity Futures Service (717) 761-2740

ACRES CORN UPDATE: Corn futures lower this afternoon from 1/4 to 2-1/2 cents. Reports of increased cash sales set off commission house selling along with ideas that the market had become "toppy". However, losses were limited by aggressive buying linked to possible export sales with feelers from Mexico, Egypt, Spain and So. Korea. The rumor that the Soviets were also interested added further support. Downside potential for the March option was limited to the $2.00 support level. Generic certificate premiums were a little softer this afternoon with sales extremely limited.

ACRES SOYBEAN UPDATE: Another tragic close for beans as a late break in oil set off a wave of heavy long liquidation in beans with closes on the daily lows. Prices edged a little higher midway through the session, but sold off all afternoon, with losses magnified by sell-stops at different levels. March closed 6-3/4 cents lower at $6.14-3/4 while November only lost 2 cents at $6.36-1/2.

ACRES WHEAT UPDATE: Wheat settled sharply lower today with sales tied to spillover weakness from the bean complex. The March option set a contract high earlier in the day at $3.36-1/2 on hopes of possible export deals with the Soviet Union. Some concern was felt that pending business with Mexico was in jeopardy because of railcar shortages and surcharges. March posted a close of $3.29-1/4 which was down 2-3/4 cents.

ACRES CATTLE UPDATE: Cattle futures closed mostly higher today in defiance to all opening calls. A late buying spree was initiated by cash connected short covering rally. Cattle were pressured on the open by sluggish boxed beef movement yesterday, but midday quotes of steady fed cattle trade at $69.00 rekindled the bull market. The only down note today was January feeders, which lost 10 points at $81.40 in response to a slightly weaker cash market.

CME FEEDER CATTLE SETTLEMENT PRICE: 01/25/88 $81.75 dn $ .02

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash -best guess is for steady to slightly higher futures-a toss-up, steady to weak.

ACRES HOG UPDATE: Live hog futures closed mostly higher with June down 15, August unchanged and the remaining options from 8 to 60 higher. Ideas that heavy runs would taper off after this week's backlog was moved supported upward price momentum late in the session. Gains were pared by lower cash openings and slightly lower product prices midday.

ACRES NEXT DAY OUTLOOK: cash - steady to lower futures - mixed.

Prices were unchanged. The market tone was cautious and about steady. Current retail features and those planned for next week enhanced cartoned egg demand which was mixed across the full range. Supplies of all sizes were adequate to ample with mediums remaining in the best balance. Breakers provided a light to moderate demand for the more than adequate offerings. Northeast Chicken Parts

Thursday, Jan. 28, 1988

PART 1 OF 2:

Trading activity was good on breast items, fair on the balance. Line run breasts were short of current trade needs and even higher prices fail to attract additional product. Rib breasts were in much the same position as line runs. Cutlets were well cleared and higher prices were easy to obtain but the call was not nearly as aggressive as noted on breasts. Legs and wings were at least adequate overall for a fair demand. Leg quarters were clearing reasonably well but the strength of early week was not as apparent today. Livers were adequate, gizzards were fully adequate to ample.

OPINION

None Of Us Will Rest

To look out your bedroom window in the middle of the night and see your barn on fire is one of the most fearful events that can happen to a farmer. The barn is the center of farm family activity. The animals you love are housed there, and the year's crops. And the expensive tractors and other machinery. In addition, the barn represents a wealth of family and community history. The old date stone somehow gives you a sense of belonging. Your roots are thus defined.

And to loose all this emotional and economic wealth in a sizzling, steaming, smoking, crackling, roaring inferno is about all a farmer can take--if it's an accident. If the fire is set by an arsonist it's intolerable.

That's what's happening in the back mountain area of Luzerne County. Twenty barn fires since May have area farmers and volunteer firemen reeling.

Now a group of farmers and property owners are meeting regularly to keep informed and provide support for those who have been hit. This group has faced the problem, not only of the unsolved crimes, they also find little information available to help them know what to do. So they are doing what they can under this difficult situation.

If you are in an arsonist-known area of activity, block off parking spaces around barns and other buildings whenever possible, they say. Use anything available, like logs, wagons or barbed wire. And remove farm machinery from barns and cover them with tarps to minimize losses if the barn burns. Keep the path of the farm pond open and free from snow. Record license numbers of suspicious vehicles.

Many people have responded in friendship to those farmers who have experienced loss. And the community cooperation drawn together by this concern provides one positive aspect in the ongoing story. But the weariness of those involved is evident. The uncertainly as to when and where the arsonist may strike again is frustrating.

We can only extend heartfelt sympathy for those who have suffered and applaud those who are doing what they can to prevent future damage.

Yet an arsonist is still at large. And none of us in the farm community will rest until the perpetrator of these hideous crimes is brought to justice.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Editor:

In noting the saying posted in a Lancaster County Place, "THE THINGS THAT MAKE MEN AND RIVERS CROOKED, IS FOLLOWING THE PATH OF LEAST RESISTANCE," noting such I thought of the happy faces on the Lancaster County Tourist folders depicting the happy faces on the models. Of course, things change and as captioned, the Farm Show this week, Jan. 14, 1988, "The Evolution of Excellence,"; the thought occurred that, as farmland is hard to come by, perhaps the smiling faces are more an expression in having an actor's job than in a high resulting from the good country air? Now I wander if new highways, through the farm valleys, roads to nowhere in particular, however attractive to tourists, will be as enchanting; especially to those whose farms will be mutilated?

200, yes two-hundred years of labor. It follows wherever an exploitable item or someone has a buck, happy lifestyle, one has? There are ten sharpies trying, vieing to promote some phase of the Money Game! "The Evolution of Excellence." For 6,000 years sharpies have been exploring ways to exploit what God did in seven days. It sure seems that the now proposed potential for another billboarded review of smiling faces, Tourist Trappings, turn out to be another doggie search for the right holes. Having hung theirs in the cloakroom in keeping with clean and green $100 million proposal, they now want to grab some of the tourists' response to, "You have a friend in Pennsylvania." So few, it seems, remember when friendship was a virtue instead of an industry....Tourism? Family farmers? "Evolution of Excellence?"

"Too big to do little things.... Too little to do big things!" Such rings a bell! Anyway, what is it to me? Aside from some of, the, my tax moneys, being a man, what affects others also affects me. Further having been raised under similar circumstances, grown through years of involvement in Community affairs one learns the ABC's the XYZ's, the rest of the alphabet. Not that the PhD.'s, BS's, etc., aren't very much a part of designs and things. However, one can fast lose interest in a good thing like the family farmer and unique Lancaster County lifestyle,

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin
Lancaster County Agriculture Agent

To Transfer Silage

Many temporary silos were used last fall to store the extra silage needed to feed our dairy and feeder cattle. Our Agronomy Specialists tell us that any silage to be moved from a temporary storage to an upright storage should be done in cold weather. When moved in warm weather (over 40°) there will be more chances of heating and molding. Make the transfer in cold weather and do it as rapidly as possible. No additives or preservatives should be needed in this process.

By transferring to the upright silo, you can utilize the mechanical feeding equipment in your upright silo.

To Plan Your Estate

During my lifetime the management of farm labor, livestock, crops and machinery has been very important in order ot obtain maximum production. Many farmers have excelled in these areas. Now, as we look into the mid-eighties, I feel that money management is of growing importance to the farmer and warrants much morew attention and knowledge. The planning of your estate, including the making and updating of a will and also the proper farm transfer are considerations that are very important, especially with recent changes in the tax laws.

Today, the average farmer handles more money in one month than their ancestors did in a year. We urge more attention to estate planning and money management as part of good farm management.

We would encourage you to attend the Estate Planning Meeting on February 25 and the Farm Transfer meeting on March 10 -- both start at 7:30 p.m. in the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster. Attorney John Becker, Farm Law Specialist and Dr. Larry Jenkins, Farm Management Specialist at Penn State University will be the speakers.

To Control Wild Birds

The problem of starlings and other birds in farm buildings and in feedlots is quite common and one that is very difficult to solve.

During the cold weather, birds are searching for feed in buildings and feedlots. Some people use a stuffed owl or a tape with distress bird calls. Others use a caulking-type cartridge with a stick-um material and bead it on top of rafters where birds roost. The use of window screening over open ducts, windows and doors is another way to keep them out of buildings. For the open feed lot, control is not easy.

Birds not only consume feed, but are unsanitary and carry lice, mites and disease.

To Protect Your Lungs

Be it in the coal mines or on the farm...dust can destroy lungs. Farmers who are exposed to dust over long periods of time risk the disabling disease called "farmer's lung". As the dust accumulates in the lungs the tissue hardens. This can lead to a variety of respiratory ailments including bronchitis and asthma. If the condition is not diagnosed soon enough, irreversible lung damage may occur.

Preventing farmer's lung doesn't necessarily require any elaborate or expensive equipment...a simple mask when dust can't be avoided... for example when handling dry bedding, sweeping dusty walls or walks or grinding and mixing feed.

Keeping the overall level of dust down is also helpful. Therefore as soon as feed sacks or chemical containers are emptied they should be discarded in the proper manner. Regular housecleaning of work areas is another good idea. Not only will the area look better...you'll feel better without all that dust in your lungs.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

YOU—AN ANSWER TO PRAYER

January 31, 1988

Background Scripture:
Matthew 9: 35 through 11:1.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 10: 24-33.

When we think about answers to prayer, it is usually from the perspective of how and when God answers our prayers and how, perhaps, we know that he has answered them. There is, however, another perspective that most of us overlook; ourselves as answers to prayers. Often, the problem is not that God doesn't answer prayer, but that we don't.

I vaguely remember a story about a little boy who was found crying on a busy city street. He had been sent to the store by his mother, but lost his money along the way. A curious passerby stopped to console him and was amused that the little boy said he had prayed that God would send someone to help him. "Apparently," said the man, "God didn't hear your prayer." With that the little boy stopped crying and said with conviction: "Oh yes, he heard it all right and he told someone to help me, but they didn't listen to him."

So, there are times when we need to be just as concerned about being an answer to prayer, as getting one. Did you ever stop to think how many times a day people pray to God for help and you could be all or part of the answer to their problem? There is also the prayer which Jesus raised in Matthew 9:37 when he says, "The harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few; pray therefore the Lord of the harvest to send out laborers into his harvest." How often have you read those words without realizing that you are meant to be an answer to that prayer?

WHAT TO EXPECT

How does one go about being an answer to prayer? Actually, it is still pretty much as it was when Jesus sent out the twelve and charged them. "And preach as you go, saying. 'The kingdom of heaven is at hand.' Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse lepers, cast out demons" (10:7). Wow! What a commission! No wonder so few of us ever are aware of this prayer and our need to answer it. What do we know about proclaiming the kingdom of heaven or of healing the sick, raising the dead, cleansing lepers and casting out demons? The answer: no more— and probably no less— than the disciples to whom Jesus first gave that commission.

Furthermore, Jesus does not paint a rosy picture. There will be those who accept the message and those who reject it and us. We may even be persecuted if we remain faithful to what the gospel is all about. When that happens, it does not mean failure, for we should expect to experience what Jesus experienced: "A disciple is not above his teacher, nor a servant above his master. It is enough for the disciple to be like his teacher and the servant like his master" (10:24,25).

Our sufficiency for this task to which he calls us is not ours alone. We will be empowered by the Holy Spirit: "do not be anxious how you are to speak or what you are to say; for what you are to say will be given to you in that hour; for it is not you who speak, but the Spirit of your Father speaking through you" (10:19,20). We can be an answer to prayer if we depend upon God to give us the power to do what he asks of us.

Do we really believe that promise? If we do, why is it that we do seldom venture forth to be an answer to someone's prayer?

Udder Health Meeting

One way dairymen can help combat the impact of lower milk prices is to reduce udder infections in an effort to increase production and to cut culling and treatment costs.

Another way is to improve milk quality and qualify for premium payments.

To help dairymen accomplish these goals, four Udder Health Meetings have been scheduled in Lancaster and Chester Counties. Dairymen, herdsmen, milkers and other interested people are invited to attend.

The meetings will discuss topics related to milking equipment and milking practices as well as the prevention and treatment of mastitis. New information about liner slips, teat shields, pre-dipping, the role of selenium and antibiotic residues will be presented.

These meetings are being conducted by the Penn State Extension Service of Lancaster, Chester and Dauphin Counties. Instructors will be local veterinarians and Extension Agents. Pre-registration is required. All sessions run from 9:45 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Dates and places are listed below.

Feb. 9 - Honey Brook Grange Hall, Honey Brook. Feb. 10 - Harvest Drive Restaurant, Intercourse. Feb. 11 - Rhoad's Restaurant, Quarryville. Feb. 12 - Country Table Restaurant, Mount Joy.

For reservations, call the Lancaster County Extension Service (717-394-6851) or the Chester County Extension Service (215-696-3500). Cost will be $16.00. The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

Gill Receives Fellowship To Leadership Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Kathy Gill has been selected to receive a fellowship from the 1988 Leadership Development Program of the National Center for Food and Agricultural Policy at Resources for the Future. The Leadership Development Program, which involves a month of intense study of the interrelationships between food, agricultural, and related policies and the policy-making process, is designed for mid-level professionals with strong leadership potential and proven experience in agriculture-related occupations. "We are pleased to have Ms. Gill as a participant in this year's program," says John Kornacki of the Center, "and we expect that each fellow will not only learn something about policy formation but contribute substantively to the discussion of new policy directions for American agriculture."

In addition she is the executive director of the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives in Harrisburg. In this position she is responsible for educational program development and administration, meeting planning, in-state legislative monitoring and lobbying, public relations, and community development. These efforts are focused primarily on young farm couples, cooperative employees, and high school youth.

Kathy received her B.A. in journalism and agricultural economics from the University of Georgia, and her M.S. in agricultural economics from Virginia Polytechnic and State University. She is a member of several associations including the Agricultural Relations Council, the Cooperative Communicators Association, and the Pennsylvania Society of Association Executives. Kathy was selected to be in the inaugural class of Rural Leadership, Inc., and in 1986 was elected to represent her class as Vice President on the Board of Directors.

The Leadership Development Program is now in its third year of operation and is part of the National Center's commitment toward providing continuing professional development opportunities for the next generation of national leaders in fields related to food, agriculture, and natural resources. The Leadership Development Program, as well as the policy analysis and communication activities of the National Center, are supported by a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation of Battle Creek, Michigan.

Resources for the Future, founded in 1952, is an independent nonprofit organization for research and education in policy issues concerning natural resources.

The Dairy Outlook For 1988

PREPARED BY JACK KIRKLAND AND
BLAIR SMITH
Penn State University

On January 1, 1988 the support price for milk was decreased to $10.60 for 3.67% fat milk and $10.33 for 3.5% fat milk. An assessment of 2.5-cents was instituted to cover the requirements of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget deficit reduction act. The policy situation in 1988 should remain fairly stable throughout the year. However, there are several new proposals already being discussed in Washington and there are sure to be more, if it looks like CCC purchases are going to be higher than the 5 billion pound targets for 1988 and 1989.

U.S. milk production is projected to be about 145.4 billion pounds with an increase in production per cow of 2.0 to 2.5% and the number of cows holding steady or declining 0.5%. Higher feed prices, especially concentrates, may hold down the increases in production per cow, but a milk/feed ratio of around 1.45 and generally good management still imply improvements in production per cow comparable to the recent trend. Changes in cow numbers will depend on expansion of existing farmers and the number of dairy farmers going out of business relative to new entrants. With prices expected to decline in 1988, this may be the year that more dairy farmers decide to retire early or just find something else to do.

The factors that have contributed to healthy increases in sales during the 1980's should continue to push commercial disappearance up in 1988 to about 139.9 billion pounds, a 2.3% increase. If there is a major factor which might hold back this level of increase, it could be the strength of the general economy (i.e., a recession that could be fairly severe).

If production continues to increase as strongly as it did in the fourth quarter of 1987, market prices could fall more than predicted. The M-W could come down sharply and quickly to the support price. If increases in production are moderate, consumption increases more than 2%, and if the market outlook is fairly optimistic, market prices could hold firm above the support level. The M-W price is expected to average about $10.54, 69-cents below the 1987 average of $11.23. The average Pennsylvania wholesale price is expected to be about $12.30, 56-cents below the 1987 average of $12.86. This would give Pennsylvania dairy farmers an effective price (taking the assessments into account) in 1988 that will be only 39-cents lower than in 1987.

With these projected changes in production and commercial disappearance, net removals of dairy products under the price support program would be slightly over the 5 billion pounds target, at 5.8 billion. However, depending on how factors actually affect milk production, and to a lesser extent commercial sales, CCC purchases could well range upward to 7 billion pounds or more.

Good Ventilation Is Critical To Dairy Herd Health

BY MARJORIE KEEN
Chester Co. Correspondent

GUTHRIESVILLE — "We want to get that moisture level down," Dr. Larry Hutchinson told Chester County dairy farmers. "Water droplets in the barn carry bacteria and viruses and that's why, under high humidity conditions, we have more trouble with respiratory diseases."

Hutchinson, Penn State Extension veterinarian, spoke on new respiratory diseases and vaccination programs at Chester County Cooperative Extension Dairy Day last week.

Hutchinson was one of three veterinarians giving advice on dairy herd health problems. Farm publications columnist Dr. Charles Gardner, of Ackermanville, Northampton County, emphasized mastitis control and the use of farm animal health records. Local herd health problems and solutions were highlighted by Dr. Joseph McCahon of Downingtown.

Rounding out the program sponsored by Chester County and Penn State Extension and Hamilton Bank, county extension agent David Swartz explained new tax law considerations and compliance with state law on farm fuel tanks.

Because respiratory organisms are carried on water droplets, it is important to get barns opened up and move more air, Hutchinson explained. "Ventilation matters at the height where the cow's or calf's nose is. For a calf lying down, that's six inches from the floor."

Other factors causing respiratory problems are ammonia and other gases which reduce the ability of an animal's lungs to clear out bacteria, according to Hutchinson.

Hutchinson continued, "If we're going to stay out of pneumonia problems, we need to limit stress." He named environmental stressors: heat, cold (for the very young calf), humidity; and physiological stressors: birth, partuition, high milk production, weaning. Also, disease/injury stressors: pain, tissue trauma, fever, toxins, drugs and vaccines; and manmade stressors: trucking, moving, crowding, nutritional imbalance, and starvation.

Speaking on mastitis control, Gardner recommended using a clean paper towel or cloth for each cow before milking. All three vets answered dairy herd health questions from the audience.

Although the Pennsylvania law on fuel storage has been in effect since 1927, it hasn't been enforced on farms, Swartz stated. However, last year a Berks County fuel dealer instructed drivers not to fill skid tanks next to buildings because of its liability, according to Swartz.

"Two times so far in the state of Pennsylvania where there was a fire on a farm," Swartz related, "the insurance company reneged on paying . . . because the farms were not in compliance with this code. In one instance, according to our safety specialist, the fire was not even started by a violation . . . it was something else."

"That's the major reason why you need to be concerned about it," Swartz concluded, "even if you don't care personally about having more safety on your farm."

Erie FFA Studies More Than Animals And Farm Equipment At Farm Show

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

LANCASTER — The Pennsylvania Farm Show is one of the highlights of the year for members of Pennsylvania's Future Farmers of America. For some, the visit is merely a trip to Harrisburg to participate in the state meeting held on Wednesday. For others, the visit involves some very careful planning for a three or four day trip to the Capitol.

At least two FFA chapters in Erie County make it a yearly project to travel to the Farm Show, but they don't just participate in the FFA meeting and see the latest in farm equipment. They also visit businesses in the area to make their four-day trip truly educational.

The Wattsburg and Fort LeBoef Chapters travel together in rented vans, leaving Erie County early on Tuesday morning and returning late of Friday afternoon.

John Pavkov, advisor for the Wattsburg group says, "We try to make it an educational trip. They learn a lot more from our visits to industries, and they collect packets of information which they share in other classes. They are required to give speeches in English class when they return. Everything os constructive."

In addition to the Farm Show, both chapters visited Ford New Holland to watch farm machinery being built, and Atlantic Breeders Cooperative to learn more about artificial insemination. Pavkov said that many of the students come from dairy farms.

This year he added another event to the group's schedule: eight of his 11 students participated in the square dance competition on Tuesday night. Pavkov said he danced in the contest as part of the Campus 4-H at Penn State, and thought it was a worthwhile activity for his students. "It is a little different emphasis. We are building life skills, and they can enjoy square dancing forever."

Costumes for the dance were purchased with money raised in the citrus sale, and a professional was used to help them prepare for the event. "They are very enthusiastic," Pavkov said of his students.

While in central Pennsylvania, the two chapters stay at the Hershey Motor Lodge. Both chapters contribute funds to help pay the cost of the trip, but students also must pay part of the expenses. Besides a citrus sale, the chapter also sells cider and raffle tickets for an FFA beef purchased by their local bank.

To select students, Pavkov chooses those who are receiving the Keystone Farmer degree and those who are members of the square dance team. He fills out the roster with students who have demonstrated a commitment to the group and have shown a willingness to work. He said, "They must meet academic requirements, and they must promise to do all the work they miss. They must be a worker and be part of the group.

Kerry Duncan, one of two advisors for the Fort LeBoef group says they have been making the four day trip quite a few years, and they feel it is an educational experience for the students. "They get to see the Farm Show, which is the best of Pennsylvania agriculture, and they go to the FFA meeting. We think it gives the younger members incentive to see those who have achieved."

In addition, both groups toured the Capitol Building and visited the William Penn Museum while in Harrisburg. For those FFA groups, a trip to the Farm Show is much more than animals and farm equipment.

These representatives of the Fort LeBoef FFA Chapter visited Lancaster as part of their four day trip to central Pensylvania from Erie County.

Turfgrass And Grounds Maintenance School

Landscapers, grounds keepers, golf course superintendents and garden center personnel should consider attending the up-coming Turfgrass and Grounds Maintenance School sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension. The training is scheduled for Feb. 16 and 17 at the Luzerne County Community College.

This year's event will involve Extension specialists from Penn State University and industry representatives as speakers. The school also offers commercial exhibits on display for participants. Agricultural Agent Bill Pencek comments, "This year's topics offer an array of up to date subject matter for anyone involved in the turfgrass or ornamental horticulture profession. There will also be Pesticide Applicator update points awarded."

For more information and a copy of the program and registration form contact Bill Pencek at The Lackawanna County Extension office 963-4761.

Rabies Kills Holstein Heifer In Lebanon

BY PAT PURCELL

ANNVILLE (LEBANON CO.) — David Weaver regrets the day last summer when a raccoon wandered in daylight hours into his yard as he played catch with his daughters. That raccoon was probably rabid. Weaver shot and killed it because he thought it was sick.

David Weaver of Annville and daughter Lisa study the quarantined Holstein heifers for any abnormal behavior. Weaver lost a 20-month-old heifer to rabies and he is presently under going treatment for exposure to the disease.

But Weaver may have saved himself many hundreds of dollars and may have protected himself and his wife and children from the threat of rabies if he had taken that raccoon to be tested for rabies.

Lebanon, Berks and Schuykill counties are hosting a rapid outbreak of rabies according to health officials. Farmers, parents and children must be alerted to the dangerous presence of rabies in these counties. A human as well as an animal can die in a short time if not medically treated for the infection of rabies.

For the first time in 15 years, since Dr. Lynn Sammons, VMD, of Willow Creek Animal Hospital near Reading, has been practicing, a dairy animal has contracted the disease. An extremely uncommon incident for this area, but not unusual considering the number of rabid animals being reported in the last few weeks.

"Lebanon, Berks and Schuykill have a high number of hot cases. We have raccoons attacking dogs, raccoons attacking people, so it is no wonder we have a situation now with a dairy animal being infected," said Sammons. "If people are not alerted to the situation we may have many more cases."

The 20-month old heifer was four months pregnant and was among a shipment of Holsteins being exported to Saudi Arabia soon. Weaver's heifer herd is quarantined and will continue to be so for the next six months preventing him from selling eight other heifers to the export market.

Weaver believes the heifer was bitten by a skunk, which his children saw in the hay mow during daylight hours three or four weeks ago. The incubation period can be that long. And it is particularly peculiar behavior for a skunk to be out in broad daylight. Although it is impossible to identify all the rabid wildlife on a farm and to make sure each one is killed, Weaver's situation could have been prevented.

"People were talking about rabies being in the area then, but I didn't pay any attention to it. I regret that. If I had had the raccoon tested as I should have and he would have been rabid, I would have had my herd vaccinated then and prevented this," said Weaver.

"People always have 20-20 hindsight. We know rabies is in Lebanon and Berks county so to prevent losing some of their herd farmers should just go ahead and vaccinate."

Back Mountain Barn Fires

Sands' barn, located on Eighth Street in Wyoming, was the sixteenth blaze to occur in the string of arson fires. Losses include a two-story wooden barn, nine prize Holsteins (six died in the fire and three later), two dogs, two tractors, a baler, complanter, show equipment, and small tools in addition to 5,000 bales of hay. The fire marshall's office listed damages in excess of $75,000 while Sands estimated his damages at $150,000. Only the barn was insured.

According to Sands there were 32 head of cattle in the barn at the time.

"A couple of years ago I sold the biggest part of my herd... I kept a small nucleus to build on," Sands recalls. "We were aiming for 35 cattle and then we were going to quit. We got as far as 32."

An important part of Sands' nucleus, he says, was a cow named Sandsdale Dreamy Doll. "She was a $10,000 cow," he remarks, out of his well known Dolly line and the only daughter of Dolly's he kept. Dreamy Doll perished in the fire along with her young bull calf born a couple weeks before the fire. Sands had given the calf to his daughter Harriet as an early Christmas present. Sands now possesses just one daughter of Dreamy Doll to perpetuate his Dolly line.

Concerning rebuilding, Sands states, "We're not going to do a thing until we catch this guy. I'd be deathly afraid to build now."

Meantime, his cattle are being housed at three separate locations, at nearby Hillside Farms, at the Dagostin's Berwick farm, and at a farm in Elizabethtown while he looks for a suitable barn to rent.

Sands and his wife, Marian, were awakened at 4:40 a.m. the morning of the fire by a neighbor who saw the flames. According to the Times Leader, a local paper, five fire companies with 75 fire fighters responded to the blaze. The Sands' 110-year-old barn built by Sands' grandfather with additions by Sands' father and himself, was an integral part of their 166-acre century farm.

"1988 has to be a better year than 1987," Sands states, referring to the fact that his wife has had two serious operations in 1987 in addition to their fire.

On a positive note, though, Sands says he has heard from a multitude of friends and acquaintances since the fire. "I knew I made a lot of friends over the years, but what a way to find out," he observes.

Sands is currently serving as president of the Columbia-Luzerne Holstein Club, is a past state director of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, is a member of the Agricultural Conservation Board in Luzerne County, and for 25 years has judged cattle in Pennsylvania and surrounding states.

Among the three remaining structures destroyed at the time of the Sands fire was a small barn owned by Margaret Smith, a house and a cottage. Damages to the barn and contents were listed at $10,000.

Seventy-six-year-old Johnny Natt and his wife, Rose, 71, are dairy farmers whose barn was one of five barns torched the morning of September 6. Their building was the ninth structure to fall victim to the arsonist's match.

They fared better than the Sands family. The blaze destroyed a smaller wooden barn to the front of their property leaving a block milking barn housing about 63 head of cattle still standing. Five heifers in the wooden barn were rescued, but 500 bales of hay were lost with the barn. Damages were set at $20,000, and, according to Mrs. Natt, they carried no insurance on the structure.

For the past 35 years the Natts have operated their 70 acre farm and presently milk about 45 cows.

Spry Rose, who says she often arises at 3:00 a.m. to go to the barn, paints a graphic picture of their early morning blaze.

"I was feeding the cows at 4:10 in the morning," she says. "Then the dog was barking and I went to the back door and saw a light on the road. I was looking and looking to see where that light was going to go and it wasn't going. Holy gosh, I saw the barn up in flames! I ran and I said, 'Dad, the barn's on fire.'"

Rose says she regrets now that they didn't keep the barn insured. "We thought the barn was no good but it was good for hay storage if nothing else. Now we don't have any place to put our heifers for the winter. But you don't think of these things," she conlcludes philosophically.

She adds that at their age they won't replace the building.

A total of five barns became charred ruins the morning of the Natt fire. Total losses attributed to an arsonist's match that morning in less than an hour's time amounted to $240,000, with one barn housing valuable antiques totaling out at a $100,000 loss.

According to Joe Hardisky, leader of a group of concerned farmers and citizens, there was much confusion among the fire companies the morning of the five fire multiple blaze, on September 6. Often they encountered an additional blaze on the way to fight another. But by the time of the second, and thus far, the last multiple blaze on December 12, when the Sands structure burned, the fire companies had become much more organized.

McAvoy Fire

A $250,000 loss was sustained by Charles and Ann McAvoy of Canterbury Farms, Coon Road, Wyoming, when their newly renovated barn and its contents were devastated by an arson blaze on Sunday evening, November 8. The McAvoys' barn was the sixteenth structure to be burned in the chain of arson fires.

The McAvoys watched as many of their new and untried dreams went up insmoke along with their barn. The couple had been in the process of changing the dairy barn over to be equipped to handle sheep which they planned to purchase this spring.

Lost in the McAvoys' fire besides their 130-year-old barn were two dogs who were family pets, a new four wheel drive John Deere tractor worth $70,000, a conveyor, 8,000 bales of hay and a large quantity of oats and three antique sleighs. The McAvoys were partially covered by insurance.

According to the couple, the 80x85x45 foot high barn had just been refurbished with new siding, a new roof, and sections of a new barn floor plus other changes to accommodate a sheep operation. Ann said some of the beams of the barn were from Chestnut trees cut from the farm itself.

"I don't think the tractor had a hundred hours on it," remarks Charles McAvoy.

Ann says she finds it particularly horrendous, considering where the blaze started. In order to set the fire, the arsonist walked past the family's two dogs confined in the barn.

One of the dogs that perished, she notes, was a stray befriended by the family which her young son considered as a gift from God. After the fire, she continued, the heartbroken youngster lamented, "God sent us this dog, and this arsonist took him away from us."

"I was sick that somebody could do something like this," she said.

The start of their sheep operation will probably be delayed a couple years, remarks Charles. They plan to rebuild the barn as soon as possible.

With the intricate fire, smoke, and burglar alarm installed in the barn, Ann says, the police told her they were puzzled as to why the arsonist chose their barn. It was the alarm system at about 9:35 a.m. Sunday night which alerted authorities about the fire. The McAvoys were away at the time and returned to find their barn engulfed in flames.

Defensive tactics such as these farm wagons belonging to Stanley Crispin pushed together in front of a barn are being employed by many Back Mountain area farmers. They seek to deter an arsonist by making it hard for him to park near farm buildings.

Reflecting on their losses, what rankles Ann McAvoy most seems not to be the deprivation of material possessions.

"An arsonist is a criminal, he robs," she states in a voice filled with indignation. "With one has stolen a portion of our lives we cannot replace. It's like death, how can you get over it?"

Scott Fire

Until the morning of September 6, Warren and Pauline Scott of Falls, R.D., counted among their possessions a 90x45 two story wooden barn in which they housed 22 head of beef cattle. The Scotts' barn was one of five barn, including the Natts' barn, to be torched that morning within minutes of each other.

That morning, according to the Scotts, they were awakened at 4:30 a.m. by a friend who's a volunteer fireman, checking another fire call. The friend informed them their barn was on fire. Since all the phone and electrical wire had already been burned off during the blaze, the Scotts had to wait until their friend returned home to report the blaze to the fire company. By the time the fire company arrived, the barn was gone.

Damages to the Scotts' barn and contents was set at $75,000. In addition to their barn they lost a tractor, elevator, two manure spreaders, one wagon, two balers, and 5,000 bales of newly mown hay. All the cattle were removed to safety. Although there was some insurance, according to Scott, it wasn't even enough to replace all the lost hay. Scott, now retired, is the third generation to farm the 70 acre place.

Since they had nowhere to keep their cattle, the Scotts sold all but six and quickly as possible replaced their barn with a metal pole structure located behind their house at a distance from the road.

"I put the pole barn up on the hill behind the house," Scott said.

"There's not much to burn on those metal ones," Pauline, his wife, observes.

Combatting An Arsonist

What can a community do to combat an arsonist? Joe Hardisky, a fulltime mechanical engineer who thoroughly enjoys farming his third generation 100-acre farm on weekends and holidays didn't know, but was determined to find out.

After the string of blazes in which five barns including those of the Natts' and Scotts' barns were burned on Sept. 6, Joe decided he'd had enough.

Subsequent to hearing a plea by Bob Appleby, fire chief, for volunteers to help the fire companies in their fight against the arsonist, Joe offered his help.

"I'm just one person. What can I do?" he recalls asking Appleby.

Now Joe finds himself a leader of a group of concerned farmers and property owners. "I didn't realize I'd be getting into it this far," he confesses.

The group meets to keep informed on how to combat the arsonist, Joe says, and also acts as a support group for those who have lost barns. Joe feels some progress has been made in their struggle although often as not he says, he feels like they are "reinventing the wheel" as far as learning what to do in an arson crisis situation such as theirs.

He was dismayed, he said, to find that there was no central source in the state where information about arson prevention, such as compilations of what has and hasn't worked in other areas in situations like theirs is readily available. If they'd had ready access to such information in the beginning, Joe feels, they'd have cut down on their learning time and may have been able to prevent some of the fires.

"I could understand it if we were back in the 1800's," he remarked, "but there is no excuse for it in this age with the technology we have today."

Joe has set two goals for himself. The first is the establishment of an arson watch or task force, perhaps located in Harrisburg, that could be deployed in situations like the Back Mountain area. The task force would be able to quickly disseminate information regarding preventive measures to local residents to help them organize and coordinate their efforts.

Joe feels coordinations between groups seeking to halt the arsonist in the Back Mountain area is lacking. "We need something to coordinate local citizens with the local and state police," he said

Secondly, he says, he plans to record what has and hasn't worked in his area for future reference for others faced with a similar situation and make it available to them.

Rabies Kills Heifer

There are two ways vaccination can be done. The farmer can administer the vaccine to his herd. Or, he can have his veterinarian do it for him. If the veterinarian does it and an animal in the herd becomes infected with rabies and dies, the USDA will reimburse the farmer for the price of the animal.

"I thought the animal had Lysteria so I contacted Dr. Sammons. He said he thought the heifer acted as if it had rabies, but just couldn't believe it, because he's never seen a case of it in dairy animals in all the years he has been in practice. He started treating her for Lysteria, but diagnosed it as rabies," explained Weaver.

The animal was constantly drooling saliva, bellowing, not eating and had difficulty walking. The next day Weaver saw the heifer she was totally blind and she was drinking a lot of water. The day after she was dead.

Dr. Sammons decapitated the cow and Betty Weaver took it to Summerdale labs in Harrisburg for testing. As soon as the results were confirmed Weaver's telephone began ringing. Medical and health officials called insisting Weaver seek the treatment immediately. He had casual contact with the heifer and said there was much concern that he might contract the disease considering he had several cuts on his hands.

Rabies is as fatal to humans as it is to animals. It can be spread through saliva and blood. The first treatment is extremely painful. According to Weaver, a molasses-like substance is slowly injected. He had two shots the first night, which was the first of five treatments. The injections are to enable the victim to build-up an immunity to disease before it has had time to incubate. The treatment is uncomfortable and inconvenient, but the disease is fatal without it.

"They were very sure that I had to have the treatment," said Weaver.

Weaver's herd is vaccinated and also his dog. He got rid of all the barn cats and has been shooting any raccoons and skunks around his farm.

When an animal is killed which is suspected of having rabies it should be taken to a lab for testing. Although the testing lab in Lionville will only take the head of the animal if the animal is bigger than a rodent, the Summerdale lab in Harrisburg will accept the entire animal which is a critical factor in the control of rabies.

People who attempt to remove the head of an animal which may have rabies may contract the disease while doing so. At no time should a person touch the animal without having atleast three pair of plastic gloves on or thick rubber gloves, according to Dr. Sammons.

Eliminating all contact with the animal will eliminate the chance of contracting the disease. The animal should be lifted by a shovel or a fork into a plastic bag and wrapped again in two more plastic bags. And if it is a large animal, a veterinarian should be called to decapitate the animal. But Summerdale Lab will accept a full size animal.

"The outbreak of rabies is rapidly moving northeast through Lebanon, Berks and Schuylkill counties and Chester county is also getting many reports of rabid raccoons. The only way to control it is to keep wildlife populations down and to vaccinate herds," explained Sammons.

Dale and Fred Rice Produce Young Sire For Landmark Genetics

HUGHSON, CALIFORNIA — Ricecrest Ned Boy JAY-et, Reg. #2024940, a young Holstein bull bred by Dale & Fred Rice, Chambersburg, PA, has been selected for sampling in the young sire proving program of Landmark Genetics. His semen has just been released for use in herds on official DHIA test throughout the United States.

As a member of Landmark Genetics' "GO" (Genetic Opportunity) program, JAY is undergoing thorough testing. He has successfully passed his health tests and the goal now is to get a minimum of 50 daughters milking in 40 herds across the U.S. for a high repeatability on his first proof.

Pete Blodgett, director of the young sire development program for the international artificial breeding company, said, "We've selected this youngster because of his outstanding bloodlines."

JAY is a son of Ned Boy, a sire noted for strong, wide daughters with good substance of bone and high protein and fat yield. His Very Good 87 Shardale Arlinda Chief Jemini dam has records at nearly 1,000F and her Very Good 86 Elevation dam has over 100,000 milk lifetime and records to 22,000M. The next dam, by Gay Ideal is Very Good 88 with over with over 1,000F and 170,000 milk lifetime. JAY has an outstanding maternal sister that is Very Good 87 with 867F as a 2-year-old and is one of the real high index cows in Pennsylvania, as well as being the dam of two Landmark Genetics young sires.

JAY's pedigree includes potent sires for type and production; Ned Boy, Jemini, Elevation and Gay Ideal which combined with an outstanding cow family gives Jay the inheritance to sire width and substance of bone with well attached udders and high fat test.

Semen from JAY, according to Blodgett, will be available for sampling in the "GO" herd program for the next 60 to 90 davs. For more information, contact Landmark Genetics, Telephone (209) 883-4001.

Back Mountain Barn Fires

sures suggested by Joe and his group to be taken by area farmers and concerned citizens to deter the arsonist include such things as blocking off parking space around barns and buildings wherever a car could pull off. Farmers are advised to use anything available such as logs, wagons, or barbed wire. They are also advised to remove all farm machinery from their barns and cover them with tarps to minimize losses if the barn burns.

Farmers with ponds are advised to keep the path to the pond clear of snow in case of emergency. All are asked to jot down the license numbers of suspicious vehicles.

According to Joe, an arsonist sets a fire for one of four reasons, for kicks, for revenge on the property owner, for the pleasure he derives in watching a building burn (a pyromaniac), or for financial gain.

Regarding an end to the saga of the Back Mountain arson fires, there is a weariness in Joe's voice.

"You just keep saying, when is it gonna end?... You don't know how many hours we spent in front of our barn. It gets very frustrating."

Despite all efforts, Joe says, the police as yet have no suspects. A reward of $7,000 is being offered by area residents for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the individual or individuals responsible for the arson fires. All names of informants will be held in strict confidence. Anyone having such information is asked to dial the area 24-hour arson hotline number at (717) 696-3267.

Additionally, Joe Hardisky is very much interested in hearing from anyone who has experienced a similar arson problem in their community and how they h andled it. He is also willing to impart information about what they've learned to others facing an arson situation. He can be reached at (717) 675-1006.

Mt. Joy Co-Op Honors Its Top Producers

BY LISA RISSER

MT. JOY — The top producers and Honor Roll members of the Mt. Joy Farmers Cooperative received a resounding round of applause from their peers at the co-op's annual banquet on Wednesday. Co-op members also greeted new producers and elected two board directors.

The Top 10 Producers for Mt. Joy Co-op begins with Ken Zurin with 4,640,000 pounds shipped. Following him, in order, are Stoltzfus Farm, Risser Brothers, Robert Greider, John Landis, Harold Brubaker, Joe Wivell, Harold Drager & Son, J. Richard Groff, and Donegal Manor Farm.

The Honor Roll includes new members, Elmer K. Breneman, Richard K. Metzler, and Robert Brandt, as well as Alwine Farms, Amos Conley, Sam Conley, Richard Groff, and Jay Nissely.

The co-op's new producers are Herman and Charlotte Fittery, James and Susan Zeidler, John L. Landis, David G. Miller, Kenneth M. Denlinger, Robert M. and George M. Rohrer, Carl and Kathleen Weidler, James and Nancy Zuck, John J. Risser, Glenn B. Gockley & Son, Herbert B. Weidler, and Carl and Dale Brandt.

Members re-elected Roy Alger and Elvin Krieder to the Board of Directors for three-year terms. Alger reported that the co-op now had 108 producers and that the organization shipped 9,000,000 pounds of milk in December, the highest amount ever. Alger noted that January's total may shatter the new December record.

Twenty-five percent of the milk shipped by the co-op goes into cheese production, 70 percent is used for bottling and ice cream, and the remaining five percent goes to fulfill other commitments.

Dairy School

Long calving intervals can be costly to dairymen. They can be caused by a number of factors affecting reproduction.

To help dairymen learn more about dairy reproduction, a two-day Dairy Reproduction School has been organized by the Penn State Extension Service of Lancaster and Chester Counties. Dairymen, herdsmen and other interested people are invited to attend. Pre-registration is required.

Participants will have the opportunity to observe reproductive tracts, learn more about cows' reproductive systems and how they function. Reproductive and herd health management programs will be discussed. Attention will also be focused on nutrition, herd records, goals, semen handling, progesterone testing and other developments.

The school will be held February 4 and 5, 9:45 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at the Gap Fire Hall in Gap. Cost will be $20.00. For reservations call the Lancaster County Extension Service (717-394-6851) or the Chester County Extension Service (215-696-3500). The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

MACMMA

ably to the recommendations from MACMMA up to this point. However, we are continuing to work together on this," explained McSparran.

McSparran reminded members that dealers need members and members need dealers. MACMMA has been successful in working with dealers and McSparran said he hopes to continue that success. Since September 1987, MACMMA has been distributing over-order premiums on Class I milk to producers shipping to the Mid-Atlantic market.

Nearly $1 million in MACMMA premiums have been paid out monthly to these Federal Order 4 dairy farmers. Through MACMMA's efforts ADC members received in September, a 21-cent per hundredweight (CWT) premium on Class I sales. Milk producers received a 27-cent premium per CWT in October; 19-cent premium per CWT in November; 23-cent premium per CWT in December; a 53-cent premium in January and a 67-cent premium per CWT in February. One-half of that price goes for all milk.

However, while milk support prices were cut in October of 1987 by 25 cents per CWT and as of January 1, 1988 by 50 cents, ADC members were receiving some relief from the producer premiums.

"RCMA has been getting a lot of publicity lately to encourage people to sign-up. And I think that's good. MACMMA doesn't work against RCMA, I think we all must try to work together," said McSparran.

"We (ADC) want to keep a level milk market and try to do this with a commitment to members and we need a commitment from members. For 70 years it has worked well and we don't see a need to change. We are getting good results," added McSparran.

McSparran reported a higher percentage, up to 53 percent, of Class I sales in Order IV and, also in Order IV, 95 percent of the milk producers belong to a coop.

Regional Farm Bill

In the east there is no excess production and according to McSparran people are actually looking for milk. From Maine to Florida and east of the Mississippi milk is a scarce commodity. Price cuts are national, but overproduction is not.

"We'd like some changes in the farm bill, but no matter where we make changes it always has an effect on another area," said McSparran.

Deducting Your Heifer Expenses

BY MARJORIE KEEN
Chester Co. Correspondent

GUTHRIESVILLE — Whether or not you choose to deduct your pre-productive heifer expenses under the new tax regulations, "you still must come up with your costs for heifers," Chester County Extension agent David Swartz told dairy farmers last week. Swartz explained the Farm Price Method of Simplified Inventory Evaluation under Internal Revenue Service (I.R.S.) regulations.

"All this amounts to is going to page 2 of Lancaster Farming and finding out what yearling heifers, say, sold for at New Holland," Swartz said. "Take off the price of commission and trucking and that becomes the cost of the heifer . . . that I.R.S. will accept."

To document this, Swartz advised, "Clip out the market report (with) the date on the top of the newspaper. Put two or three weeks of those in your file for your 1987 taxes. Down the road, if I.R.S. audits your '87 return, you have documentation of the value of your heifers. It's as simple as that."

Hood Speaks On What's Happening In Extension

BY GINGER SECRIST MYERS
Adams Co. Correspondent

YORK SPRINGS — Dr. Lamartine Hood, Dean of the College of Agriculture, Penn State University, addressed a packed audience at the 72nd Annual Meeting of the Adams County Extension Service held Thursday evening, January 21st, at the York Springs Firehall. Hood's topic was, "What's Happening in Extension."

In his opening comments, Hood reminded his audience that the Cooperative Extension Service is a cooperative effort working with funding from the federal, state, and county level. He reiterated that this funding had dropped 25 percent in the last nine years. Through the joint effort from the grassroots membership and state legislators, last spring the General Assembly allocated an additional $5 million dollars ear-marked for helping to rebuild the Extension Service system.

Hood continued by outlining how those funds are being utilized. He stated that $3 million dollars are being used to fund 55 Extension positions out in the counties, most all of which will be multi-county positions. A portion of these funds also will be used for additional 4-H material and other educational materials for the counties.

The remainder of the funds will be used for positions on campus for personnel support to the county staffs. This will include 20 campus positions and 24 Graduate Assistant positions in Extension. Operating funds for Extension Specialists will be enhanced so that insufficient traveling funds will not hamper specialist travel to county programs. Hood explained that $250,000 from this portion will also be set aside in a Special Needs Fund.

Hood summarized. "We are on the verge in Pennsylvania of creating an Extension system that will be second to none nationally... What we need to do is to develop programs that will service your needs more practically. To approach this problem, 17 inter-disciplinary groups have been working on a four year Plan of Work."

He continued, "However, we must enhance our research. We have addressed the Extension problem, but we have not yet addressed the research problem. Extension and research go hand-in-hand and we must be able to back-up Extension information with current research information."

Another highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Extension Leadership Recognition Award. County Extension Director Thomas Piper presented this year's award to Myles Starner, Starner's Fruit Haven Orchard, Aspers.

Starner and his family have established a model dwarf rootstock orchard on their 32-acre farm. It is an operation that attracts inter-state and international visitors. Their trees, which are planted on contour strips and are supported by four trellises, produced 38,000 bushels of fruit in 1986.

An Adams County native, Starner was active in the Senior Extension Club and in 1951 was Adams County's first IFYE exchangee, traveling to Mexico. He has served the Adams County Extension service in a variety of capacities for the past 21 years. He has served as a school director, township supervisor, a 30-year member of the Knouse Food Co-operative, member of the county ASCS Board, president of the Adams County Fruitgrowers Association, and served as the chairman of the committee that established this award more than a decade ago.

During the annual business meeting, changes to the association's by-laws were approved by the membership. Six new members were elected to the Extension Association's Board of Directors. These included: H. Wayne Biesecker, Steve Donaldson, Sally Miller, June Leer Shook, John Weaner, and Mark Widerman.

PDA Planning To Modify Its Pseudorabies Control Program

BY LISA RISSER

LANCASTER — "We've been battling psuedorabies for seven years now, and we're near to licking it," John Henkel told Lancaster and Chester County swine producers at the Lan-Chester Pork Day held this week at the Lancaster County extension office.

Henkel, chairman of the Pennsylvania Swine Health Advisory Board, told farmers "I welcome the exchange of viewpoints and opinions here. It's the only way we're going to get to the bottom of this problem."

The USDA is getting more involved in the disease and currently is working on developing uniform methods and rules for its treatment and eradication. The plan, which is near to being finished, will take a state or region through a number of stages of cleanness.

The Pennsylvania Swine Health Committee, which is composed of 16 people representing swine producers and allied industries such as trucking, packers, PFA, and marketers, recently presented a series of recommendations to the state Department of Agriculture from which the Department has developed a program to combat psuedorabies.

On the evening of February 10, swine producers, Committee members, Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff, and other industry representatives will gather at Ephrata High School to discuss the proposed program. The meeting is open to all interested parties.

Henkel outlined and explained the program's basic provisions to farmers item by item.

1. The Department will maintain its surveillance program and make diagnostic services available to detect pseudorabies infection. A survey of every swine herd will be conducted in the heavily pseudorabies-infected areas.

"The current program checks cull sows and boars. Everyone realizes this isn't a good, representative sampling," Henkel stated. "The only information you get is a general outlook of the condition of pseudorabies within an area. Identification has been a big problem. The second sentence of the provision is the state's newer approach."

When a herd tests positive, regardless of how many animals are positive, it will be quarantined. Following this, every herd within a five-mile radius of that herd will be tested. "This is about the only way to see where pseudorabies is. Until that point, we have no real hope of combating the disease."

The cost of testing herds at neighboring farms will be picked up by the state as will the cost of running the test at the lab.

2. Infected, exposed, and vaccinated swine will be quarantined in keeping with federal regulations and proper biological security measures.

When a herd tests positive and is quarantined, an agreement will be drawn up between the producer and a technical committee representing the state. The agreement will consist of a plan to clean up the producer's herd. Each farm will be handled differently according to its specific set of conditions. The state now feels that forced depopulation is no longer the immediate answer to a pseudorabies problem, according to Henkel.

The Department of Agriculture will seek rule changes to restrict the importation and intrastate shipment of feeder pigs to pseudorabies-monitored herds.

This measure is very similar to what other states such as Illinois, Tennessee, Ohio, Minnesota, and Iowa, have implemented. The system, developed by Illinois about two years ago, requires that anyone selling feeder pigs would have to own a psuedorabies-monitored herd.

Sampling will occur one time per year. In breeding herds of 25 or less, all animals will be tested; in herds of 26 to 100, 26 pigs will be tested; and in herds with more than 100 animals, 28 pigs will be tested. The producer will be responsible for the cost of collecting the sample, while the state pays the lab fee for running the test.

In answer to questions as to why psuedorabies-free counties must test before selling feeder pigs, Henkel replied "We don't know how much psuedorabies is out of the Lancaster-County area, and this will give us that information. Also, if Pennsylvania wants to fit into a national program, it will have to have a state program that reflects what other states are doing."

Henkel added that those farmers who have a "qualified-free" herd will not be expected to conduct any further tests than they already are doing.

4. Vaccine will be permitted within designated high-risk areas provided specific reporting and recordkeeping requirements are met.

The Department is and will approve authorized vaccination for quarantined herds and for those herds in infected areas. Henkel warned farmers that the vaccine is not a cureall for the disease, but instead a useful tool for the control of psuedorabies.

At this point, Henkel cited recent findings on the efficiency of the psuedorabies vaccine. The new information, supplied by Dr. Timothy Trayer, a veterinarian from the Denver, Pa., area, is based on using Norden's modified-live virus on a 120-sow herd with a 100 percent infection rate.

The program, started by Trayer in August, consisted of vaccinating breeding animals as they were farrowed. These gilts were then revaccinated at weaning. When the replacement gilts, 26 in all, were tested at six months, only one was positive. The gilts were raised in the same building that housed the infected herd.

5. Incentive payments of up to $100 per breeding animal depopulated will be offered to owners of infected herds who agree to depopulate breeding animals according to an acceptable eradication plan for the herd. Eligibility for incentive payments will be contingent upon removal of breeding animals within 90 days and elimination of PRV from the herd within eight months.

This provision features no change from what has been in effect, Henkel said.

6. Voluntary control measures will be developed in accordance with uniform national state-federal rules for the eradication of psuedorabies.

This item relates back to the plan being worked on by the USDA that will devise uniform methods and rules on the treatment and eradication of psuedorabies. The state plans to work into whatever program the USDA devises.

Henkel is pleased overall with the state's new psuedorabies program. But he did mention what he saw as a drawback: "I'm personally not satisfied with the way that the state plans to move quarantined hogs. They want truckers and packers to handle quarantined hogs one day per week, using separate facilities. These facilities and the trucks that moved the pigs would then have to be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before handling other hogs.

"I think we need more flexibility in this matter. Other states don't have this restriction," Henkel added. Such a restriction would hamper the producer's ability to cull infected animals in a timely and cost-effective manner. It also would necessitate positive identification of infected pigs.

Franklin Holstein Breeders Hear About Veal Market

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

LEMASTERS — "A bright spot in our industry is the tremendous prices we are getting for veal calves," John Cope, National Director of the Holstein Association told the audience at the Franklin County Holstein Club Annual Meeting. "The Beef Promotion check-off dollars are earmarked for veal promotion and research," he said. "The veal industry spends $250 million on the purchase of veal calves and another $200 million on dairy products to feed them."

Cope reported that beef promotion is going well, and that the beef industry has engaged nationally known radio commentator Paul Harvey as spokesman for beef for the month of January. Actor James Garner continues as beef's celebrity spokeman.

He urged all dairymen to vote on the Beef Referendum May 10. "We have an opportunity to help ourselves with this program," he said.

Cattle registrations were down 35,000 from a year ago, and transfers were down 20,000, Cope reported. "We will have to seek new ways to operate the national breed association, he said.

The international services division, however had a "banner year," according to Cope. Its entire $1.25 million debt has been repaid, he reported.

Also addressing the dairy farmers January 16 at Lemasters Community Center was Ken Raney of the state Holstein office. He thanked the local Holstein association for its help with the PDCA judging school, held in Franklin County last summer.

He announced that the state association took in $4.8 million on export sales in 1987. The holding capacity of the farm at Middletown has been increased by 300 head, he said.

George Cashell, state director, announced the scholarship sale to be held Wednesday evening, February 24 at the Holstein Convention in Lancaster County. A stained glass picture of Osbornedale Ivanhoe, made by Steve Kinney of Iowa, will be auctioned. The picture, in its own stand, is seven feet high and six feet four inches wide. Also to be sold that evening are frozen embryos, two ampules of Osbornedale Ivanhoe, a quilt with a 75th anniversary logo, and a large cake. The money obtained from the sale will be invested, Cashell said, and the interest given out as scholarships.

Harold F. Crider, Chambersburg, will be one of Pennsylvania's thirty-four delegates going to the national meeting in California.

Jaye Young, Greencastle, presented the Junior Member Awards. The six winners were chosen from nineteen entries submitted.

The two-year old milk and fat category was won by Darview Rebel Penny, owned by Mike Daugherty of Greencastle. At two years and one month, Penny produced 21,004 pounds of milk and 770 pounds of fat.

The top milk animal in the three-year old category was Aldina Tempo Jewel, who produced 25,128 pounds of milk and 823 pounds of fat. She is owned by Rodney Meyers, Chambersburg. Ro-Meyer Heanvenly Haven Harmony, owned by Toby Horsh, St. Thomas, produced the most fat in the three year old class. At three years and three months she produced 23,896 pounds of milk and 892 of fat.

Rodney Meyers also had the top animal for milk and fat in the four year old class. Aldina Commander Jan produced 26,977 pounds of milk and 1077 of fat.

In the aged cow category, Burn Astro Kitty, owned by Mike Cordell of Chambersburg, was the top milk-producing animal, with 25,305 of milk and 914 of fat. Rodney Meyer's Aldina Bootmaker Jean topped the aged cow fat class with 21,944 of milk and 925 of fat.

The meeting was moderated by Roy Cordell, Chambersburg, outgoing president of the club.

The club's award for high registered cow for milk went to Oakleigh Farm Pete Lass, owned by Oakleigh Farm, who produced 30,839 pounds of milk with a 3.0 percent test in 305 days at five years and four months. She produced 931 pounds of fat.

Klingdale Glendell Lee was the high registered cow for fat, producing 21,240 pounds of milk and 1191 pounds of fat at six years and eight months. Her butterfat test was 5.6 percent. She is owned by Frank Ressler.

Elected to the Board of Directors for three year terms were George Cashel, St. Thomas; Harold F. Crider, Chambersburg; Robert Eckstine, Mercersburg; and Carl Hartman, St. Thomas.

State Honors 200-Plus Year-Old Farms

HARRISBURG — Ninety farm families received a special award on Secretary's Night during Farm Show. They were recognized for owning a farm that has been in the family for 200 years or more since the ratification of the U.S. Consitution.

The Bicentennial Farms Awards, presented by Peter C. Myers, deputy secretary of agriculture, are part of a program sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the USDA Food and Agriculture Council.

Two Pennsylvania farms tied for being in the family for the longest time. Part of the family since 1717, the farms of John and Ruth Miller, Lancaster, and Harry and Elizabeth Zimmerman, East Earl (Lancaster), have been owned by family members for 270 years.

Lancaster Officials Press

Fall, six possible corridors for the combined Route 23/30 were proposed. Most options would have cut through Amish farm land. In December, a seventh possibility was suggested by the Amish that would follow the path of the Amtrak mainline between Lancaster and Philadelphia.

Huber was quick to point out that the Thursday press conference was not completely in response to the governor's statement. "We've been working together for quite some time to develop a consensus for Lancaster County. It was our understanding that the PennDOT, the Governor, the Secretary were going to come forward with the statement sometime in February. So we had planned to have a press conference on Friday. But with the statement yesterday from PennDOT, why, we thought that we should gather here today to make a statement relative to Lancaster County's support of highways and the need of highways here."

The county commissioners were generally pleased by and agreed with the Governor's position, stating that they "were never in support of any option that cuts through the heart of Lancaster County farm land."

Huber went on to add, "We have great concern that even though Route 23 is going to be addressed, the design and construction of a limited-access highway to Route 30 does not seem to be an equally high priority with the state of Pennsylvania."

Huber challenged the Casey administration to immediately address the Route 30 congestion problem, adding "We as a community can't be content to wait 10 to 12 years to see a solution to this problem. We need one immediately."

Huber distributed a position paper that was endorsed by the commissioners, represented at the conference by himself, Brad Fischer, and Bob Brenneman. It was also signed by top Lancaster County officials from the Chamber of Commerce, the Lancaster Auto Club, Lancaster County Agricultural Preservation Board, Lancaster County Planning Commission, and various eastern-county townships. Senators Gibson E. Armstrong and Noah Wenger and Representatives John E. Barley, Terry R. Scheetz, and Jere W. Schuler also were signers.

Besides calling for construction on the Route 23 bypass and a Route 30 alternative, the paper stated:

Of highest priority in this project is a creative design with a sensitivity to preserving prime farmland, maintaining the unity of church districts and communities, and eliminating concerns of overdevelopment. A limited-access highway with properly placed interchanges and overpasses, farm equipment underpasses, and limited signage will address these issues. In addition, maximum effort must be used to design the highway utilizing public right-of-ways and following the boundaries of farms.

The concern about affordability is understandable but should not dominate planning efforts. Community leaders must work with state officials and our state Governor to develop creative financing mechanisms to fund the highway that best meets Lancaster County's needs.

Lanacaster County Commissioner James Huber announced the commission's consensus opinion on the Route 23/30 corridor. Supporting the position were a baker's dozen of top county officials.

especially being in such a hurry to get there and finding nothing to do. Like having too many on the payroll. Too many with nothing to do!

Anyway, not having a good reason for wanting to find something better to do we always find some who are more interested in making money, than in living and letting others pursue theirs, as they are. Now with so many wanting to share limited quarters, "Rubbing elbows with people reveals things about them you never suspect."

I hate nothing worse than to be compelled to lose confidence in those who claim their interest in the family and home; when the most dollar value fronts as the real reason to update communities to accommodate tourists' potential real estate market for every potential dollar coined piece of script; there are ten sharpies devising means to grab it. Why not? It's what you do with what you got. And in Lancaster County, improving what it's got (like Routes 23/30 and a few others), what better way to preserve Pennsylvania farmland??? The Amish? Leave em alone!

Dan Peffley
Hummelstown

Editor,

Farmers need to be united in their efforts to protect and improve agriculture. We all know what can happen otherwise. It's easy for an invading army to win if the opposition is self-destructing with a lot of infighting. It's even worse when someone is making false accusations like those contained in a recent letter to the editor.

Unnamed persons were quoted to back up false accusations. The statements were directed at the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), the New York Farm Bureau Federation and the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA).

I want to set the record straight.

The American Farm Bureau, during the federal budget debates, opposed both the budget compromise (because it increased taxes) and the Gramm-Rudman cuts (because they were unfair to agriculture). Farm Bureau sought and continues to seek an across the board freeze to "buy time" for a total reform of the budgetary process.

The American Farm Bureau Federation and PFA have steadfastly opposed any tampering with major provisions of the 1985 farm bill including the dairy support. Congress wrote this program to get agriculture back to producing for a market — not the taxpayers.

And it has worked. During 1987 the average price paid producers for manufacturing milk exceeded the support price for the first time in seven years --- ending the largest price drought in the history of the government dairy support program.

CCC purchases dropped to 5.6 billion lbs. of milk equivalent during the 1986-87 marketing year -- less than one-half of the previous year's 12.3 billion lbs.

The AFBF and PFA policy objective of "more net income for farmers" depends heavily on market prices...not the support price. Market prices are controlled by supply and demand. Support prices are controlled by the shifting winds of the political world.

In the Farm Bill debate of 1985, American Farm Bureau and PFA strongly supported the Olin-Michael proposal to let supply and demand determine support price levels.

The opposition wanted to enact another farmer-financed dairy diversion program which would have cost dairyman anywhere from 75 cents to $1.35 per cwt. The last dairy diversion program was unsuccessful. So, do it again? The final farm bill approved by Congress contained provisions which met with Farm Bureau's goal of linking dairy supports to the level of government surpluses.

PFA has supported the Regional Cooperative Marketing agency (RCMA) program and the concept of over order pricing for many years. We joined in unison with the state Agriculture Department and other farm groups including the Grange and Pennsylvania Farmers Union in urging independent dairymen to join RCMA during the enrollment drive in 1986. And as Mr. Tewksbury well knows, four of our leaders -- Carl Brown of Pine Grove, Karl Kroeck of Knoxville, Harold Eby of Montrose and Kenneth Mummert of Chambersburg -- served on the RCMA Steering Committee, which involved all three farm organizations.

It was the steering committee's effort that led the RCMA producer sign-up in Pennsylvania. Harold Eby is presently serving as the RCMA Coordinator here in Pennsylvania.

We believe that self-help efforts such as the RCMA and product promotions are the best means for dairymen to improve their milk checks. Although RCMA is a very important vehicle to improve net farm income in the Northeast, it still faces a major problem and that is low participation. We need to correct that by encouraging farmers to signup.

We want the price of milk to increase based on supplies. The RCMA will help that situation.

PFA offers many different programs to help farmers make more net income. We have the farm records program, forward contracting, and insurance programs geared to the needs of farmers. For example, our Blue Cross and Blue Shield Hospitalization Insurance program is one of the best for the farm family, and cost less than many others.

It is naive and foolish to think that farmers can make enough money from federal milk price supports to keep their dairy in business. Price should be based on supply and demand, not political whims.

We must be totally honest with farmers about the limited budget resources. We can not hold out false promises and false hopes to our farmer members, because that is a disservice to agriculture.

I make no apologies for supporting the policies in Congress that were adopted by our members, because we will continue to do so.

It's so easy when things are not going our way to point the finger at somebody else, when in reality we should be working harder ourselves. Let's work together to make RCMA's successful. Let's not be sidelined by muck throwers or those predicting doom.

Editor:

A few weeks ago a Bill S-1869 was introduced to change the current nation-wide across the board cuts in dairy prices to a regional base. The present system will bankrupt the dairy industry in the east. Since most of our milk goes in the fresh market we have stricter inspections, our labor, housing and property taxes are higher. Under the present system we will lose our young dairy farmers and the smaller, well-established dairy farms. We are already short of milk in the east.

By dividing the country into regions, those regions with express productions would get a lower price in accordance to the amount of excess milk, while those with production under control would be spared these cuts.

California leads the country in CCC purchases, followed by Texas, Wisconsin, Idaho, Minnisota and Arizona. James Grueble, executive officer of Dairymen Co-op, Creamery Assoc. of California has blasted this bill (S-1869) saying our problem is national, which it is, making it regional does not change this. California along with some of the other Southwestern states can produce milk cheaper than we can in the east. They have an environmental advantage we cannot match. But where would they be without the government subsidized water that is used to grow the hay that is fed to the cows began four years ago in our facilities. Our poultry research team began by testing the Zone Station environmental control system under actual operating conditions on our birds.

The Zone Station has proved to be a reliable unit. It is equipped with the necessary safeguards, automatic alarms and backups to provide safe and effective control for your investment - your birds.

Designed to be easy to operate in the barn, the Zone Station System provides complete control and monitoring of your flock's vital statistics. Easily adapted to work with your current environmental control system, it is designed to work in your existing structures. And it can be tied into our Total Environment Plus system for complete barn management.

For a limited time, we are making a special introductory offer of PAL-TECH's new Zone Station System. For more information about this special offer or an information kit, please call Larry Pluta in Lancaster, PA at 717-394-7567.

manure, considering the nutrient value of the manure just a "bonus," may be wasting a lot of money on fertilizer that they do not need.

Is Sidedressing Worth The Cost?

First of all, the common practice of sidedressing extra nitrogen probably does not result in a significant increase in yield if the nitrogen needs of the crop have already been met by the application of manure or fertilizer. For example, Plot #4 was sidedressed with 100 pounds of nitrogen after receiving enough nitrogen from manure to produce a 160-bushel corn crop. This plot did have a yield five bushels higher than Plot #3, a similar plot without the sidedressed nitrogen.

The increase in yield, however, did not match the increase in cost. Assuming a cost of 17.9¢ per pound for nitrogen and a $4.00 application charge, the sidedressing cost was $21.90 per acre. Dividing this extra cost ($21.90) by the increase in yield (five bushels) equals $4.38 per bushel.

This is, of course, the price that you would have to get for your corn before the sidedressing treatment would be economically feasible.

Soil Tests And Manure Analysis Results

A relatively flat, uniform field was selected for the experiment. The field was subdivided into six plots, each approximately two-thirds of an acre in size. Each plot was soil tested before planting to determine the existing phosphate and potash levels in the soil. The Truckenmillers also analyzed their dairy manure for N, P, and K.

Penn State soil tests showed that all six test plots had phosphate and potash levels already high enough to meet crop needs. Since P and K levels were already adequate, only nitrogen -- from either manure or fertilizer -- had to be applied to meet crop needs. The manure analysis test showed that there were 2.60 pounds of nitrogen, 0.86 pounds of phosphate, and 2.42 pounds of potash per 100 gallons of manure.

Descriptions Of Test Plots

All plots were treated identically except for fertilizer and manure application rates. With a yield goal of 160 bushels of corn per acre, it was determined that 170 pounds of nitrogen would be more than adequate to meet crop needs. Since all the test plots were in soybeans in 1986, thirty pounds of the nitrogen requirement would be supplied by them, leaving a balance of 140 pounds of nitrogen needed from manure and/or fertilizer. Starter fertilizer (11-52-0) was applied to all plots at a rate of one hundred pounds per acre, dropping the quantity of nitrogen needed down to approximately 130 pounds per acre.

The following is a summary of the nutrients applied to each plot:

Plot #1- Both fertilizer and a "normal" application of manure were applied to this plot. Nitrogen fertilizer was sidedressed at a rate of 130 pounds per acre, sufficient to meet crop needs. The additional nitrogen from the manure was not taken into account. The intent of this plot was to illustrate a situation where a farmer does not scale back his fertilizer application rate on fields that receive manure, considering the nutrient value of the manure just a "bonus."

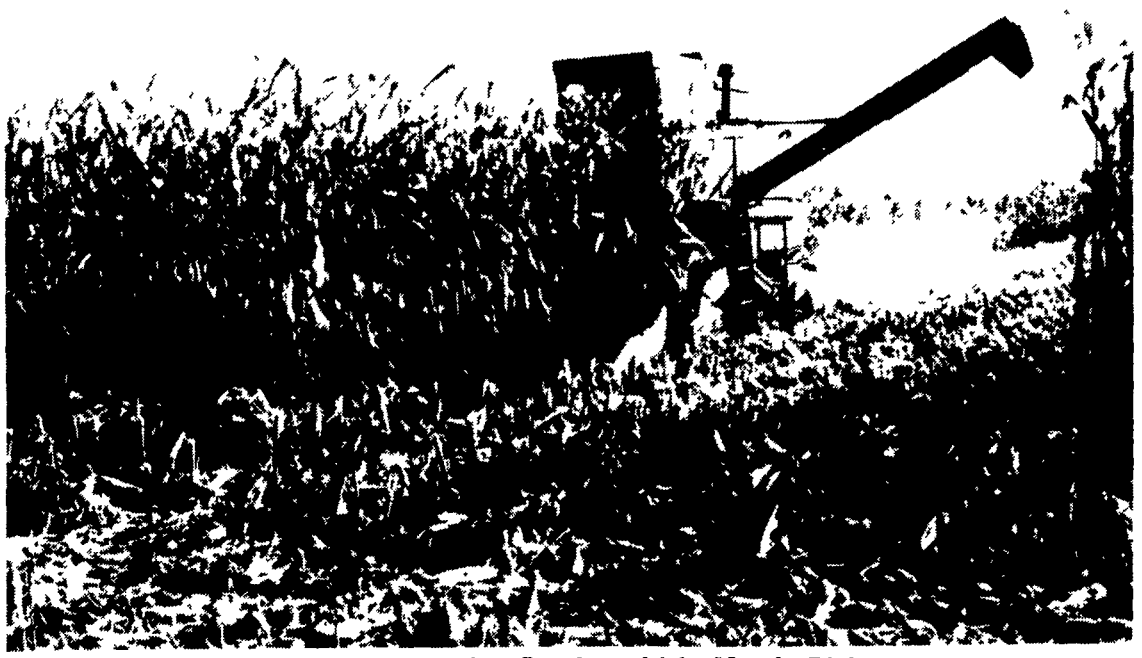
Plot #2- This was a control plot. No manure or fertilizer was applied except for starter fertilizer.

Plot #3- Manure was applied at a rate sufficient to meet the nitrogen needs of the crop. No fertilizer was applied except starter.

Plot #4- This plot was similar to Plot #3, except that an additional 100 pounds of nitrogen was applied later in the growing season. The purpose of this plot was to determine if excess sidedressed nitrogen will increase crop yields.

Plot #5- Nitrogen fertilizer was sidedressed at a rate of 130 pounds per acre, sufficient to meet crop needs. No manure was applied.

Plot #6- Twice as much manure was applied as needed to meet the nitrogen needs of the crop. The purpose of this plot was to illustrate a situation where a field close to the barn is covered with manure several times during the winter or a situation where weather or time constraints make it difficult for the farmers to get manure to more distant fields.



The tests plots were harvested on October 14th by Marvin Bixler.

All plots were planted an April 29th using a John Deere Max Emerge corn planter. Pioneer 3352 seed corn was planted in 30-inch rows at a harvest population of about 24,000 plants per acre. All plots received identical herbicide treatments.

Yield Results

The test plots were harvested on October 14th. The corn from each plot was weighed and the width and length of each plot was measured with a steel tape to accurately determine yield. The above table lists the yields as well as the total quantity of nutrients applied to each plot.

Since the manure was incorporated into the soil by disking within two days, nitrogen loss through volatilization was minimal. The "Available N" listed in Table 1 is the nitrogen from the manure that is available for plant use during the first year. Penn State estimates that 50% of the total nitrogen in dairy manure is available for plant use during the first year if the manure is incorporated within two days.

A few interesting comparisons between plots can be made. Plots #3 and #4 both received sufficient N from manure to meet crop needs. Plot #4, however, received an additional 100 pounds of sidedressed nitrogen later in the growing season. With the 100 pounds of extra sidedressed N, Plot #4 yielded only five bushels per acre than Plot #3.

Plot #3 and Plot #6 also provides an intersting comparison. Except for a small amount of starter fertilizer, neither plot received any commercial fertilizer. Plot #3 received sufficient N from manure to meet crop needs, while Plot #6 received twice as much manure as needed. All teh extra manure, however, did not improve the yield. As a matter of fact, the heavily manured field yielded two bushels less than the field where approximately the right amount was applied.

While Plot #3 received its nitrogen from manure, Plot #5 received its nitrogen from sidedressed fertilizer. Though the manured plot did receive slightly more total N, both plots received enough nitrogen for a yield goal of 160 bushels per acre. The manured plot outyielded the sidedressed plot by 8.7 bushels per acre. Theoretically, the yields should have been about equal. It is interesting to see, however, that the manure was apparently a more than adequate replacement for the fertilizer.

The Truckenmillers used Penn State's manure analysis program to determine the nitrogen, potassium and phosphate levels of their dairy manure. Manure sample bottles and mailing canisters are available through county extension offices.

Surprisingly, the control plot (#2) yielded over 129 bushels per acre. With a total of only 41 pounds of nitrogen from the previous year's soybeans crop and starter fertilizer, was expected a considerably lower yield. Since this field had received manure for a number of years, we believe that the surprising yield is probably due to high levels of residual nitrogen in the soil from previous applications of manure.

Conclusions

Though every attempt was made to conduct the nutrient tests in a "scientific" manner, we do not think we can make definitive conclusions based upon the results. Many more tests over several seasons would be needed to do that. A few observations, however, can be made.

Bob Trunkenmiller checks boom and drop hoses on sprayer used to dribble on nitrogen close to the ground.

Four New Faces At PDA

BY EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HARRISBURG — Four new faces appear in jobs at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. One switched from egg omelets to milk. One came from the wine and beverage industry. One came from Michigan Farm Bureau. And one came from a western Pennsylvania dairy farm.

But all have one common goal--help farmers market their products to consumers in Pennsylvania and in the surrounding markets. These people in new jobs are: Ronald Gaskill, director Pennsylvania Department of Ag Bureau of Market Development; Vernon Ross, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture commodity promotion supervisor; Laura Long, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program promotions director and Donna Verner, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program marketing manager.

Gaskill heads PDA's Bureau of Markets Development that includes eggs, fruits and vegetables, livestock, market news service and commodity promotion both international and domestic. "Our immediate goal is to develop a short-range and a long-range marketing plan. Planning is very important, and we are going to jump right in in January," Gaskill said. "Our first objective is to do a situation awareness or profile of Pennsylvania agriculture. Various sources have ideas on different segments of the industry, but we need to pull every thing together--our products, our packaging and our customers. And we need to assess our defficiencies so we can target our energys to improve and help strengthen our overall Pennsylvania ag marketing structure," Gaskill said.

Gaskill came to Pennsylvania in August from the Michigan Farm Bureau. His experience includes other business positions in the private sector, but he thinks the people in PDA can operate under good business management procedures even with the bureaucracy of government. "The leaders in state government want to see an effective marketing program of agricultural products," Gaskill said. "That attitude has filtered down from Secretary Boyd Wolff. The management styles here give more of a business type atmosphere," he said.

Ross has been with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture for five years under a different hat. A chef's hat, teaching people to make omelets. But with the new commodities act that gives the farm promotion committees control over their programs, the PDA representative, employed by the state, works with the industry committee to get the best use of check-off funds. Ross is this new representative for the Pennsylvania Milk Promotion Committee along with several other commodities. "My work is very challenging," Ross said. "Like the egg promotion where I did 150 to 200 meetings per year, we need to develop new ideas for milk promotion. In fairness to the Pennsylvania dairymen who support the program, we need these plans. And we need alternatives and measures to determine if we are reaching our goals. PDA and the commodity groups are in a joint effort. But the farmers now have the final say on how the plans will be implemented. The White Lite promotion is excellent, but we need to plan for future years. Youth are our future buyers. We need to reach them in their habit-forming years. We need to make plans so that the farmer knows where his money will be spent," Ross said.

Long joined the milk promotion program from the Farm Credit Administration, a dairy farm background and a Pennsylvania State University degree in economics. "I have a vested interest in the dairy industry as a whole," Long said. "I work with the grassroots, 59 county organizations with dairy princess programs. We have 4-Her's promoting milk and a lot of other volunteers. I feel strongly that these grassroots people will sell more milk in the future because of the personal contact with consumers," Long said. Since Long started in September, two new milk promotion groups started, one in Northampton County and one in Luzerne County.

Verner came to the milk promotion program from the Wine and Spirits Industry. Her background brings the other type of beverage market experience to the dairy industry. And her sales, marketing, advertising and public relations experience, give her contact with the consumer. She works with the Restaurant Association, retail grocers and the public media. "I think dairy promotion is in the infant stages," Verner said. "It has taken a while to catch up to the soft drink and beer industry, but we've made significant changes in the last two years. The progress is nice because we are not tied to as many traditional strings. Therefore, we can look at more significant ways to promote milk. At first we featured Betsy the cow and the little girl in the red and white checkered skirt and talked about how good milk is for you. Now it's not only good for you, but it's a beauty enhancer, too. With 2 percent milk you can get everything you need and much more than with soda--lower calories and a beauty enhancer," Verner said. "And the music is getting better--faster and more entertaining. We do compete with sodas and Crystal Lite. Not that we say they are bad. But we do have the nutrition along with the refreshing quality they also have."

Verner uses her previous contacts to check on milk promotion programs. "The White Lite promotion has received great reviews from the people I worked with before," she said. "In Pittsburgh they knew about it right away. I touched base with them several weeks into my new work with milk, and they knew all about White Lite. And they called it fantastic, a neat approach to the milk industry. So the other beverage people have paid attention. And I think that says a lot about our program," Verner said.

Where the Pennsylvania agricultural marketing and milk promotion goes in the next few years will be shaped to a great extent by these commodities spokespersons. And the products produced in Pennsylvania will have a good chance to receive a fair share of the market if these four new faces have anything to say about it.

Dairy Farmers To Receive $12.21 For December Milk

NEW YORK — Dairy farmers who supplied milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during December 1987 will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $12.21 per hundredweight (26.3 cents per quart); the price for the corresponding month last year was $12.78 per hundredweight. Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson also stated that the price was $12.69 in November 1987. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive plan does not affect the uniform price for the month of December.

A total of 14,221 dairy farmers supplied the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area with 913,039,252 pounds of milk during December 1987. This was a decrease of 0.1 percent (about one million pounds) from last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $114,765,119.86. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) used 398,976,349 pounds of milk for Class I, 43.7 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milkl products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For December 1987, handlers paid $13.90 per hundredweight (29.9 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $14.24 a year ago.

The balance (514,062,903 pounds or 56.3 percent) was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $11.18 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For December 1987, there was a price differential of 15.4 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standard.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received from farms in the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Ram Lamb Nominations

STATE COLLEGE — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center announces that ram lamb nominations are being accepted now through the end of February for the 1988 Ram Lamb Testing Program. This performance testing program is run at the Meat Animal Evaluation Center, State College, PA and is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Department of Dairy and Animal Science of The Pennsylvania State University, the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association and the Pennsylvania Breed Associations. This 84 day performance testing program is designed to identify the genetic merit of prospective young stud rams under similar, unbiased, management and environmental conditions. This is an excellent opportunity for the small sheep producer to compete equally with larger producers in evaluating rate of gain, structural soundness, muscularity, condition and estimated carcass merit. To be eligible for this testing program, all ram lambs must be eligible to be recorded or registered with their National Breed Association and be born between September 1, 1987 and February 28, 1988.

For more information on Pennsylvania's performance testing programs write or call: Glenn D. Eberly, Director, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16803, (814) 238-2527.

Artist Adds Sparkle To Holstein Convention

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

CARLISLE — The South Central District's turn to host the 1988 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention in February also offered an opportunity for Debbie Cornman to showcase her artistic talents. As the wife of Cumberland County Holstein breeder Steve Cornman, and a former 4-H'er, it was natural for Debbie to offer her painting ability to the committee to use in whatever way was helpful.

What came out of the offer was an attractive convention logo, expressing the sparkle of the diamond anniversary of the Association, plus a cover for the January edition of the state publication, Profiles.

Debbie says she's been painting "ever since I can remember." Her talent became a little more focused, however, after her high school graduation in 1973 when she took lessons for a year and a half from Jo Pucci who has a local studio.

She and her husband moved to California for a period of five years and it was there that she took more lessons at a studio in Fresno while her husband Steve was working as assistant dairy herdsman for a 350 cow dairy herd.

While there she became a member of the National Tole and Decorative Painters Society, and upon her return to Pennsylvania in 1981, she became affiliated with the local chapter, Keystone Painters. She continues to attend seminars and workshops, to develop her skills.

Stepping into the dining room of her farm home just south of Carlisle is like walking into a studio showing her work. One corner is filled with "decorative" items which Debbie has painted, including tinware and wood. She also has a number of her oil paintings on display. A walk through the rest of the house finds a wide variety of items Debbie has worked on, including some very fine needlework.

On canvas, Debbie does animal portraits, farm scenes, landscapes and florals. She paints in oils, though she has now branched out to use alkyds, paints which dry overnight instead of the two weeks it takes for oils. Sometimes she mixes alkyds with oils to achieve the "same lasting effect as with oils."

She works on commissions and free lances. She refers to cards, calendars, and photos to help her recall the details. She subscribes to painting magazines which give written instructions about specific pictures, including the colors and types of brushes to be used. She then interprets these pictures in her own way.

When she uses her own photography, she said she will often take six or seven pictures to look at during her painting process.

This acrylic wash pen and ink drawing was Debbie's first attempt at creating the cover for the breed magazine, Profiles. She tried to incorporate symbols from each of the counties participating on the convention committees.

This painting features the buildings of her grandfather's farm from the 1940's, with the addition of Holstein cows rather than Milking Shorthorns.

With husband Steve working with his father Creedin at Justa Beauty Holsteins, it is not surprising that Debbie has entered her work in the painting contest held each year as part of the National Holstein Convention. In fact, Steve plays a part in much of her art. Debbie says, "He is my critique on animals and landscapes."

When working in decorative painting, Debbie said she uses wood, metal, glass and fabric. Her father often cuts out wood for her, following patterns she has drawn. She cautions that metal must be properly primed before beginning the painting process.

In addition to offering private lessons, Debbie teaches group lessons in the evening. She says, "I like to share my knowledge, and I know the joy of completing a project. In my night class the students can complete a project which is pleasing to them."

Debbie says she includes information on how to handle the brush, on learning the terms and the techniques. "It is really their interpretation of what I teach them."

A bedroom in the farmhouse serves as a workshop-studio for Debbie, who says she paints whenever she can find the time. The mother of two, Rebecca, 6 and Aaron, 3, Debbie has put a small table for her children next to her larger working area. They also have toys in one corner of the room, so they can be playing near their mother as she works.

In creating the front cover for the magazine, the first front cover she has ever done, Debbie did the original art on canvas as an acrylic wash pen and ink drawing. "That makes it look like a water color and helps to give it detail," Debbie explains, adding that the original measured 20 inches by 20 inches.

She wanted the drawing to represent each of the counties in the host convention district, so she said she asked herself, "What do you think of when you think of each county?" The result is a kind of collage of the different symbols of the counties.

A red rose represents Lancaster County and a white rose symbolizes York County. There is also a horse and buggy and quilt, from Lancaster and Lebanon, and there is pottery for the famous Pfaltzgraf pottery factory in York County. A Carlisle Indian is from Cumberland County and a cannon is from both Cumberland and Adams Counties. Apples represented Adams, Franklin and Cumberland Counties, and barn scenes represent Franklin and most of the other counties. Perry is honored with a covered bridge and for Dauphin County there is an outline of the Capitol and a merry go round for Hershey amusement park.

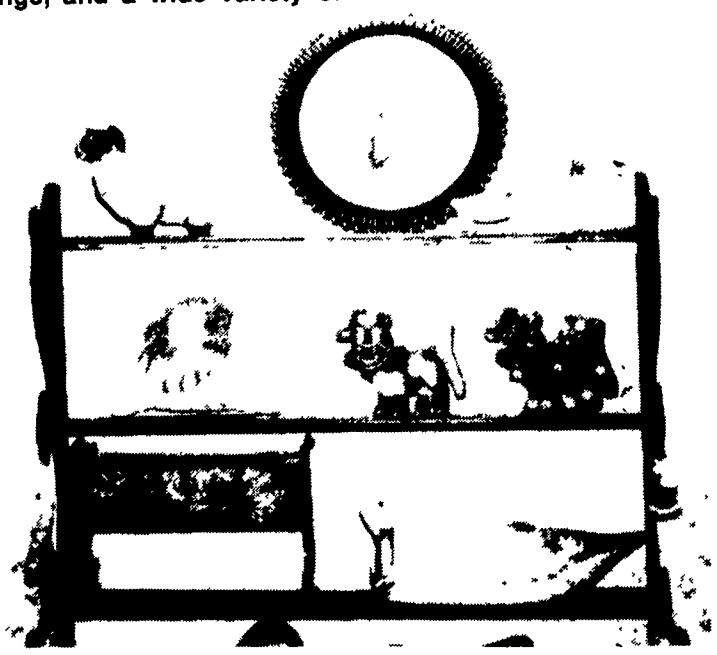
Once the symbols were selected, Debbie worked at coordinating colors. She adds, "This is special to me because I created it."

Her calligraphy talent helped her when she created the logo. She says she has created logos for other businesses, and "runs a business" of lettering certificates and doing other calligraphy.

She says her calligraphy and art interests were nurtured in high school by a special art teacher, who gave Debbie her own set of steel calligraphy pens before she graduated.

One of her more interesting calligraphy projects was to do 40 invitations for her sister Beth's wedding. Each invitation also had art work on it.

Debbie Cornman works in her bedroom studio in her Cumberland County farm home. Here she created oil paintings, and a wide variety of decorative items.



These shelves hold many of the decorative items Debbie has created over the last few years. She works on wood, metal, glass and fabric.

As a record of her work, Debbie keeps a photograph of everything she does. This not only helps her remember her creations, but it also helps people who want something done on commission. She is currently painting cows and barns on two wooden cheese boxes.

Debbie says she always has projects to do, both ideas of her own, and things for others. When she needs a gift for a friend, she gives one of her own creations.

One of her personal goals is to become a certified decorative artist, recognized by the National Association to which she belongs. In the meantime, she will remain busy expressing herself in a variety of media.

Not a stranger to the barn, Debbie showed Milking Shorthorns as a 4-H'er and was a state winner in leadership who attended the National 4-H Club Congress. Today, she can be found occasionally helping in the barn. From May to October she helps every afternoon with the 35 cow herd and 35 young stock.

Very involved with the upcoming Holstein convention, Debbie not only did the logo and cover painting, but will be donating an oil painting to the junior scholarship auction to be held as part of the Wednesday evening program.

Her calligraphy talents are being put to work as she helps to identify items which will be used in the "anniversary room" at the convention. Debbie says that she and Steve are looking for good, old memorabilia to display, including old photos or slides, ribbons from early shows, pictures of breeder institutes, field days, barn meetings or banquet favors distributed during the last 75 years.

The anniversary room will be located next to the dairy bar, and someone will be present whenever the room is open to the public. They are looking especially for pre-1950 items, which seem to be in scarce supply. Anyone who wishes to display historical items are encouraged to mark them carefully and bring them to the convention. For those with questions, Steve can be contacted at 717/258-3166. Debbie says they have found the historical information quite interesting, and hope to make it a special part of this 75th convention.

For Debbie, helping with the convention has provided challenges for her artistry, and an opportunity to work with her husband on a joint project of interest to them both.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

For so early on a schoolday morning, this youngest of the family is unusually upbeat in his outlook.

"Four to eight inches!" he cheerfully announces, with obvious anticipation, after the update he's just heard on the radio rock station's early morning weather report.

I debate the prediction, citing conflicting reports given on the late night news, not that many hours before, which gave odds that the temperature might just be too warm for snow, and could instead drench us with rain.

He fails to buy my argument. What do mothers know, anyway? Besides, rain is boring in the midst of the mid-winter-blahs.

And schools don't call a day of vacation because rain halts bus travel.

So he heads off to school through the 38-degree dreariness, already a hint of moisture thickening the air, planning what he'll do the next morning. By gosh, there'd better be snow or he'll take it as a personal affront.

As I wrap up calf feeding chores, the mist has matured to steady rain. Gee, for once, Mom might be right after all.

The herd of heifers slowly trudges through the chilly rain, down the fenced walkway, toward their pasture. Shoulders hunched, heads drooped, feet slowly dragging through the muddy walkway, their reluctance to vacate the bunk feeder area to the milking herd tugs at my sympathy.

"Please, please don't make us go!" You can almost hear them pleading.

A dozen or so purple finches, plus a couple of their goldfinch cousins, chow down sunflower seeds from the feeder ten feet up in the maple just outside the kitchen window. The usual squabbling mob of sparrows is nowhere in sight, apparently having taken cover before the hardier finches.

Suddenly the rain has turned flakey. Inside of ten minutes, fat, fluffy flakes are tumbling, cascading, pouring from the heavens. The ragged greens and browns of the yard and fields are fading fast to frosty white.

Soon, even the finches have fled to shelter in the woods and fencerows.

And, the heifer herd has done a complete about-race. Huddled together into a clustered mass of black and white, they've returned to the walkway gate, knowing they'll be let back into the feeder-freestall area the instant the cows return to the cleaned dairy-barn.

There is an undeniable air of excitement, of anticipation, of adventure, that comes with a snowstorm. It sends near stampedes of us through supermarket doors to stock up on milk and bread - and ice cream - even though we probably just brought a carload of groceries home a day or two before.

It offers the hopes of mini-vacations for many, like a certain kid probably giggling through morning classes because "I told you so."

And, it promises fodder for conversation - "How deep was it at your place?" - plus more "colorful" commentary from some of the interstate truckers we'll eavesdrop on via the CB radio, trying to gauge travel hazards for the milk truck fleet.

Momentarily, I'll slip to the post office, hoping "slip" is merely a figure of speech. Milk and bread we have, but eggs are scarce. So on the way, the dwindling egg supply in the fridge will be replenished at a friend's poultry farm.

Snowstorms call for baking, and the cozy kitchen warmth of an oven busy with bread and cookies. Soup simmering on the back burner, it's bouquet clashing with the acrid odor of barn clothes drying out in the basement after outside chores.

Like mother's everywhere, worry will shadow my day, until the kids are safely home from classes. One, for sure, will arrive grinning, gearing up for an anticipated "snow day" off. And, at least for a couple of hours, the daily routine will be altered by nature's seasonal whims.

Wouldn't winter be dull without an occasional, good-old-fashioned snowstorm?

Fish Oil May Lower Cholesterol

PITTSBURGH — Researchers report that populations such as Greenland Eskimos eat large amounts of fat yet have low incidence of heart disease. Investigators have identified the possibility that a component of a type of fat, found in cold water fish, and other marine mammals, may be significant in lowering blood cholesterol levels. The result has been an interested in fish oils, specifically those containing Omega-3 fatty acids.

The evidence seems to be in favor of including 2-3 servings a week of such fish as mackerel, salmon, tuna, or other cold water ocean fish. At the current time there is no recommendation to consume the oil without the fish since researchers are unclear as to the benefits or risks associated with such an approach!

Dear Golden Pride:

I have suffered with various heart problems and high blood pressure for the past 15 years, needing hospitalization 13 times! I was also diagnosed as a diabetic 3 years ago

Two and one-half years ago, I suffered a severe attack of angina was rushed to the Coronary Care Unit with an oncoming heart attack Since I was treated in time, the heart attack was averted. However, because of my medical history, my Cardiologist wanted to perform a Cardiac Catheterization. He informed me of the risks and left the decision up to me .. I consented because I did not want to live the rest of my life as an invalid... During the catheterization, I had a brain stem stroke which affected my vision and my walking. It also caused me to have excruciating vascular headaches

Since I have been taking the Formulas for Health (1,2,3 & 6), my headaches have almost disappeared My blood pressure is stabilizing, my vision has improved, and I don't have to walk with a cane while I'm at home I can even drive for short distances. All my heart medicines have been reduced and I am completely off my diabetic medicines but still on a strict diabetic diet I feel so much stronger and better than anyone thought possible so soon after suffering from a stroke!

I'm a great believer that God works in mysterious ways through people to reach others. I'm forever grateful to (Golden Pride distributors) for introducing me to these wonderful products I feel confident that I will continue to improve

Willa Secrest

Dear Golden Pride

I am a nurse and when I heard about Golden Pride I was skeptical My problems included very high blood pressure along with high triglycerides and cholesterol What sold me on Golden Pride was my blood test results and my doctor's wholehearted approval He was very impressed with how well I was doing since I previously had surgery for blocked carotid arteries My doctor encouraged me to keep up the Formula #1 from Golden Pride. My blood pressure came down within one week after starting Golden Pride products. I am convinced!

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

Canned food, the original convenience food, combines with the ease of microwave cooking to save you time in the kitchen.

Preparation time is easy, because canned food is cut, peeled or combined with other ingredients so it's ready to eat. Cooking time is fast. Since canned food is already cooked in the can during heat processing, all it really needs is heating. Serving is convenient because most canned foods can be heated right in their serving dish to go from microwave to table in a flash.

The secret to microwave canned vegetables is to drain off the liquid and heat -- not cook -- the vegetables. Cover vegetables with a lid or waxed paper. Allow about 2 to 3 minutes heating time on High for a 16-ounce can. It's not necessary to boil store-bought canned vegetables in their cooking liquid.

Fruits combine to make some wonderful microwave desserts, such as cobblers or crisps. Remember that canned fruits packed in light syrup or fruit juice have about 30 percent fewer calories than those in heavy syrup. Warm plain canned fruit with its juice and a dash of cinnamon or nutmeg for breakfast. One serving warms in about 30 to 45 seconds. Or top fruit with butter and a bit of granola or brown sugar or make Warm Winter Fruit (below) for a simple dessert.

Microwave-heated canned condensed soup is ready in a jiffy. Empty a can of condensed soup into individual bowls or a larger container. Microwave for one minute on High. Stir in a can of water or milk, cover with vented plastic wrap or a lid and continue microwaving until hot, about 3 to 5 minutes.

Canned main dishes, such as spaghetti, stew or baked beans, again just need heating. Cover with plastic wrap, a lid or waxed paper. There is no need to boil or heat until the food spatters or "pops." Allow about 2 to 3 minutes per serving and stir once halfway through cooking. For example, a 16-ounce can of spaghetti heats in about 4 to 6 minutes.

Try today's recipes for quick, convenient cooking. The potatoes go well with any meat, fish or poultry for a hearty meal. The quiche makes a colorful and nutritious supper or lunch. And the warm dessert is a light and delicious finale to any meal.

Easy Cheesy Potatoes

2 tablespoons butter
1 can (16 ounces) small whole potatoes, drained
Garlic salt or powder
Freshly grated black pepper
2 tablespoons bacon bits
¼ -½ cup shredded cheese

Melt butter in microwave-safe 1-quart casserole or serving dish by microwaving (High) 30 to 45 seconds. Stir in potatoes, seasonings and bacon bits until evenly coated. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave (High) 3 to 4 minutes, stirring once, or until hot. Sprinkle with cheese. Let stand, covered, 2 to 3 minutes. Makes 3 to 4 servings.

Each serving- ¼ of recipe- 132 calories, 4g protein, 10g fat, 7g carbohydrate, 154mg sodium, 27mg cholesterol.

Calico Vegetable Quiche

1 deep 9-inch unbaked pastry shell
Worcestershire sauce

1 jar (2 ounces) pimento, drained
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
⅛ teaspoon pepper
Shredded Cheddar cheese

Place pastry shell in a microwave-safe pie plate. Prick bottom and sides well with fork. Brush edges with Worcestershire sauce. Microwave (High) 3 to 5 minutes, rotating plate as necessary for even cooking. Crust is done when it no longer looks doughy or moist. Set aside.

Beat together milk and eggs in a large bowl. Stir in drained vegetables, ham, pimento, 1 cup cheese, onion and seasonings. Pour into cooked pastry shell. Microwave (High) 6 minutes. Carefully stir cooked outside edges to center; smooth top. Cover with waxed paper. Continue microwaving on Medium (50 percent power, 325-350 watts) 13 to 17 minutes or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Sprinkle lightly with additional Cheddar cheese. Let stand, covered, about 5 minutes. Cut into wedges and serve warm. Makes 6 main dish servings.

Each serving- 1/6 of recipe: 419 calories, 16g protein, 28g fat, 25g carbohydrate, 874mg sodium, 47mg cholsterol.

Stretch Your Food Dollar With Ground Beef

Stretch your food dollar without scrimping on nutrition and taste by adding a collection of ground beef recipes to your menu.

For years, ground beef has provided the main source of protein for consumers. Critics complain that beef contains more saturated fatty acids than vegetables or other meat. But today's modern feeding practices of beef results in less saturated fats than ever before. Beef provides important nutrients—minerals and vitamins which are readily digested and available to the body.

Besides being nutritious, hamburger recipes taste delicious. Since ground beef is so compatible with all kinds of vegetables and sauces, cooks can get a wide spectrum of flavor from it. For this reason, you can use ground beef in your meals every day and never tire of it. Try these recipes submitted by our readers. See, if they don't become part of your weekly menu planning.

CABBAGE ROLL-UPS WITH BEEF

8 large cabbage leaves
Boiling water
1½ pounds ground chuck
1 cup (4-ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese
1 can (12-ounces) vacuum-packed corn, drained
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 can (8-ounces) tomato sauce
1 beef bouillon cube
½ teaspoon caraway seed
½ cup (2-ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese

Pour boiling water over cabbage leaves to cover; allow to stand 10 minutes. Meanwhile, combine beef, 1 cup Cheddar cheese, corn, onion, salt and pepper. Remove cabbage leaves from water. Place about ⅔ cup meat mixture in each leaf, fold in sides and roll lengthwise; fasten with wooden picks. Combine tomato sauce, bouillon cube and caraway seed in a large covered skillet over medium heat. Add cabbage rolls, cover and cook over low heat 40-45 minutes. (If sauce is too thin, remove rols and keep warm while thickening sauce. Return rolls to skillet). Sprinkle with ½ cup Cheddar cheese. Cover and let stand 2 to 3 minutes to melt cheese.

Add cayenne to make it hot.

1 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon crushed fennel or anise seed

ANSWER - Mrs. Eldon Martin, Abbothstown requested a recipe for yogurt that does not separate. Last week we included a recipe. Here is another one from Marcia Wysocki, Stoystown and Orpha Ruth King of Myerstown suggested that 1 teaspoon of unflavored gelatin to 1 quart of milk be used in yogurt recipes to keep them from separating. She said they like it much better and everyone cheers when they find out mother is making yogurt.

Yogurt

1½ cups nonfat dry milk
1½ cups water
2 cups 2% milk or skim milk
⅓ cup plain live cultured yogurt

Combine dry milk and water in 2-quart casserole. Stir in 2% or skim milk. Scald milk: leave uncovered with microwave on high for 6 to 8 minutes, stirring once, or set temperature probe for 185 degrees. Don't skip this step.

Cool milk to 115 degrees. Mix about ½ cup of the scalded milk into the ⅓ cup yogurt, stirring until smooth. Then add to the remainder of the mixture and mix well. Cover container with plastic wrap and insert thermometer (if its microwave safe) or probe through plastic. Put the container in the microwave and plug in the probe if you're using it.

Microwave on low power until the temperature reaches 115 degrees. This will take 1 to 4 minutes or set your probe for 115 degrees. Turn oven off, leaving the yogurt inside for one hour.

Repeat step #5 twice, so yogurt incubates in the microwave for 3 hours at 115 degrees. It should be thick, set and mildly tart. If you want it thicker or tarter, microwave it longer.

Refrigerate it thoroughly. May be spooned into smaller containers after chilling. Makes 1 quart.

Tips: Save ⅓ cup yogurt to use as starter for the next batch. Yogurt is delicate—don't jiggle or move the mixture during incubation time. Heating with too high of temperatures will kill yogurt culture or cause curdy, separated areas. To use only powdered milk for the milk, use 3 cups dry milk with 3 cups water. Scald and then cool as directed.

ANSWER - Mrs. John Kobylski, Tunkhannock, requested an adult remedy for a head and chest cold. Thanks Ida Keeny, New Freedom, and J.M.S. of Bellefonte for sharing one. J.M.S. said the mixture may not smell good, but it is very effective. She also suggested putting a drop of eucalyptus oil on the corner of a handkerchief and inhaling. She added that the handkerchief should be rolled up so it doesn't evaporate rapidly.

Remedy

1 part lard
1 part turpentine
1 part Camphor or camphorated oil
1 part kerosene
1 part oil Eucalypstus (optional)

Mix ingredients together in a jar. To use, warm jar in pan of hot water. Rub liberally on chest and throat. Cover with warm flannel. Eucalyptus oil is good to inhale when sinus passages are blocked. Do not take internally.

ANSWER - Melinda Meyers, Centre Hall, requested a recipe for Monte Cristo sandwiches. Thanks Betty McLaughlin of Leola for sharing one.

Monte Cristo Sandwiches

¼ cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
8 slices sandwich bread
4 slices cooked turkey
4 slices cooked ham
4 slices Swiss cheese
2 egg whites
3 eggs
½ cup sour cream
2 tablespoons milk
About 1 cup fine, dry breadcrumbs.
Vegetable oil for deep frying.

Combine mayonnaise and mustard, stirring well; spread on one side of each bread slice.

Place 1 slice each of turkey, ham and cheese on top of 4 bread slices. Top with remaining bread. Cut each sandwich in half diagonally and secure with wooden picks.

Beat egg whites (at room temperature) until stiff; set aside. Beat eggs; add sour cream and milk, stirring well. Fold in egg whites.

Dip sandwich halves in batter; coat with bread crumbs.

Carefully lower sandwich halfs, one at a time, in deep hot oil (375 degrees). Fry until golden brown, turning once. Drain. Remove wooden picks. Serve sandwiches immediately. Serves 4.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Each winter I am torn between feeding the birds and not feeding the birds. If I feed them, will I merely attract more sparrows to the area? Or if I don't feed them, will they simply eat more buds off of the blueberry bushes?

When snow covered the ground, Philip put a bag of birdseed in the feeder. The next morning there were over a dozen sparrows at the feeder. The only other birds that I've seen there were two cardinals and one chickadee-- maybe more will come later.

This year our youngest daughter, Cindy, drove from the Wilkes-Barre area and met us at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg. I do believe that she and I only missed one or two areas of the whole complex. We even visited some places twice. That was a lot of walking. The only time that we sat down was to eat our baked potatoes. She bought a container of cider for us to share. Now that she lives in northern Pennsylvania we don't see her very often. It seems that all six of our children have lives of their own and we are left to live ours.

Some of these zero degree nights have caused me to move flower plants off of the windowsills and unto the floor. It is when the wind blows that they will freeze as many have tender leaves. Many years ago I had a large "blooming" jade plant and, as we did not have central heating, it froze in an unheated room one unexpectedly cold night.

The roads are icy this morning but by afternoon the temperature is to be above freezing so I'm planning on washing the car. It bothers me to have a dirty car and so it is my job to wash it every Saturday all year long. At least then it is clean when I go to Sunday church services.

Coping With Caregiving

BERKS — "Caregivers need care, too!" This is the theme of the seminar "Coping With Caregiving" that is being held by the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Caring for elderly family members can be physically, emotionally and financially exhausting. Although a caregiver cannot change the condition of a dependent family member, a caregiver can reduce stress and protect his or her own health by establishing limits, involving others and finding appropriate help.

Coping with caregiving will be held on Wednesday, February 24th, at 1 p.m. at the Berks County Ag Center auditorium. There is no cost but reservations are requested by February 19th. For more information on how to register, contact Michelle Rodgers, Berks County Extension home Economist, at 378-1327.

A Barn Is The Best Place To Call Home

My name is Fluffy and I think a barn is the best place to live.

A favorite game for me and my friends is jumping to catch a piece of baler twine.

Attention, Kids!

Thanks for sharing your pictures with us. The response has been overwhelming. We are discontinuing using them and regret that we have not been able to publish all of them. Watch for new details in submitting to this column.

BY "FLUFFY"
As Told To Joyce Bupp

Farms are great places to call home. They're especially fun, if you happen to be a cat.

I know, because I am a cat. My name is actually Brutus, but you can just call me "Fluffy."

That's my nickname. I got it because of my fur. No matter how hard I try to clean and lick it smooth and flat, my soft, gray coat just fluffs back out again. This tail is the worst. Things like straw and hay and dust are always sticking to my fluffy tail, and it takes me forever to get it clean.

Maybe if I lived in a house, like some of my friends, my fluffy tail wouldn't always pick up these extra things that need cleaned out. But, I like living in a barn. In fact, I think a barn is the best place for a cat to call home.

Most farms have lots of interesting places where we cats can hide, and play, and sleep. One of the best places is in the bales of hay.

Hay makes a soft, cozy bed. It's warmer to sleep on in the winter than the cold ground and softer than a hard floor. When lots of bales of hay are piled together, my friends and I like to play tag, or hide-n-seek, in the little tunnels between the bales. Bales are also good for hiding behind when you want to jump out and surprise someone walking by, as they feed the calves.

Another reason I think a barn is the best place to live is mice. Mice really like to live in barns, too. One of my jobs as a barn cat is to keep the mice out of the barn. I work hard at that job, because mice are my very favorite kind of food!

But my second favorite food is fresh, warm milk. At milking time, all my cat friends and I hang around outside the dairy barn, where the cows are being milked. We know that, sooner or later, someone will notice that we're waiting, and will bring us some milk.

Sometimes, we don't even wait for it to be poured out in our dish. We just lap up that fresh, warm milk, right out of the bucket. Once in awhile, we even knock a bucket over because we like our milk so much. That gets us in trouble.

After our tummies are full, we like to play around the barn. It's fun to roll in empty feed bags or to climb way up on high places to watch the birds, or to tangle ourselves up in a pile of hay bale strings.

When we finish eating and playing, it's nap time. On sunny days, I like to find a quiet spot at the calf pens for a long snooze in the sunshine. But in the Winter, one of the nicest spots for a nap is on a soft pile of dry hay, left in the cows' feed trough when they finished eating.

Some of my cousins prefer living in a house and sleeping on chair. Some others live on the streets in cities and some even roam the countryside, eating whatever they can catch.

But I think the very best place for a cat to live is in a barn, with soft hay, and milk, and mice.

Fresh milk? Hey guys, let's eat!

Let's see, how many of us will fit in one trash can?

Looks like we both get here too late for lunch.

TRY MEAT SUBSTITUTES FOR A CHANGE OF PACE

Even though we all have our definite favorites, we don't really want the same food all the time, nor can we always afford it. Variety is the spice of life, so let's look at some changes you can make.

Smart shoppers and good cooks are always looking for flavorful substitutes for the usual dinner stand-by. But, many of us feel that unless we eat meat we won't get adequate amounts of protein to meet our body's needs.

Meat substitutes can easily supply adequate protein and other nutrients. Wise substitutions can also stretch food dollars.

When selecting substitutes for servings in the meat group you should consider their approximate protein content. They should supply a total of 30 grams per day. For example, 2 eggs supply about 15 grams of protein, one cup of macaroni and cheese supplies 15, and cornbread and one cup of beans, supplies about 20 grams.

Meat substitutes can be made up of complete proteins such as milk and eggs. They can be extended proteins -- that is, milk, meat, and eggs cooked with or added to grains, beans, and nuts. They can even be a combination of incomplete proteins which together make up a complete protein. Cereal with milk, cheese pizza, rice pudding, tuna rice casserole, chili, and many other combinations are familiar extended dishes in many households. They are good to eat and relatively inexpensive to prepare.

So are those incomplete protein combinations that supplement each other. Here's a list of hearty, inexpensive meatless dishes to help you get through the remaining weeks of the winter.

* Baked beans/cornbread
* Black-eyed peas/rice
* Beans, tortillas or brown bread
* Beans/barley soup
* Lima beans/corn
* Beans/pasta
* Refried beans/rice or tortilla
* Pita bread/chick pea puree

You may not have considered these dishes to be adequate meat substitutes, but they are. Served as part of a well-balanced menu from the four food groups, these substitutes will help you maintain your health without costing a fortune.

START GOOD EATING HABITS EARLY

Do you know that experiences children have between the ages of two and six often become the basis for their food habits later in life? Keep this thought in mind there are some important things to remember about food and your children.

Most importantly, remember that children learn by imitating. If you as parents set a good example in your eating habits, your children will learn from you.

Children may eat less during this period of their lives than you think they should. Remember that they are growing more slowly than during the first two years of life and require less food.

Kids who feel well are reliable judges of how much they want to eat. Insisting that they always "clean the plate" encourages overeating.

Your youngsters may have definite food preferences which change from time to time. Don't worry too much about temporary food jags.

A relaxed, calm atmosphere where they are not forced to eat will most likely contribute to good eating.

New foods will be more readily accepted if they are introduced one at a time and in very small servings. If your child refuses a new food, try it again later and perhaps in a different form.

Kids handle small glasses, cups, forks and spoons easier than adult size. Food cut in bite-size pieces and finger foods are easier for them to eat.

Offer your children water occasionally between meals. Thirst can be mistaken for hunger.

Sometimes children cannot eat enough at a meal to last until the next one. Choose between meal snacks carefully. Foods such as milk, pieces of raw fruit and vegetables, fruit juices (not sweetened fruit drinks), cheese, and plain crackers are food nutritious snacks.

Fashions Modeled By Holstein Convention Participants

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

LANCASTER - Women attending the 75th anniversary convention of the Pennsylavania Holstein Association will be treated to a fashion show featuring clothing from Watt and Shand, a local department store. The convention is being held February 23, 24 and 25 at the Willow Valley Family Resort and Convention Center, Willow Street, Lancaster County.

Models will be wives of Holstein breeders, and they will show the latest in spring fashions. Donald Swarr, director of promotion and special features for Watt and Shand, said there will be rainwear, suit looks, career looks and casual wear, showing the newest arrivals in spring and summer clothing. He emphasized that with 17 models wearing three accessorized garments each, there will be a wide variety of looks to please the audience.

The fashion show is part of a special ladies luncheon to be held at the Treadway Resort Inn in Lancaster. In addition to fashions, ladies will be treated to a presentation on using herbs made by Mrs. Bertha Reppert, owner of The Rosemary House in Mechanicsburg.

Women attending the convention will also enjoy the unique collection of shops at Willow Valley Square. The Strawberry Shop features Nancy Crandall pillows, the work of Hazel Wesley and woven items by David Kline of Red Lion. Unique Expressions has bisque dolls dressed like Amish, and Country Pleasures features needlework and stenciling.

Women are encouraged to attend the Wednesday morning program which features Dr. John McCormick, columnist for Hoard's Dairyman. They will participate in the tours and sales of Host Day as well.

Reservations for tickets can be made with Jed and Sue Beshore, 396 Old York Road, New Cumberland, Pa. 17070 by February 2.

Room reservations must be made in writing to Willow Valley Family Resort and Convention Center, 2416 Willow Street Pike, Lancaster, Pa. 17602, also by February 2.

Helen Cope, Mechanicsburg, left, and Sheila Balmer, Lancaster, are wearing fashions from Watt and Shand Department Store that they will model as part of the Ladies Luncheon being held at the Treadway Resort Inn as part of the 1988 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention. They both served on the planning committee for the ladies program.

Farm Accident Training Course

YORK — Farm people are well aware of the hazards involved in the farm working environment. In spite of improvements in safety equipment and precaution, farm accidents continue to cause death or serious injury. In many cases the difference between life and death depends on the ability of a member of the farm family to perform critical emergency first aid procedures in the time period before medical or rescue personnel can reach the scene. For this reason "First on the Scene", a course to teach farm family members how to handle emergency situations, is being offered. The training will be conducted by Dr. Dennis Murphy, Extension Safety Specialist, assisted by local emergency medical service technician personnel. The training, sponsored by the Women's Committee of the York County Farmers Association and Cooperative Extension, will be held at the Extension Service meeting room at 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York on February 2 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. All farm families are invited to attend. Ladies are asked to please bring a covered dish. Since the room will accommodate only 50 people for this you are asked to please pre-register. Please contact Deb Rohrbaugh, of the York Co. Farmers Association, at 301-941-1165 or John Rowehl at the York County Cooperative Extension Office at 757-9657 to sign up by January 26, 1988.

4-H'er Visits Denmark

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin Co. Correspondent

WAYNESBORO — "Each time I see a part of Danish life, I feel the pride that the Danes have in their culture and history," Chrystal Reichard wrote from Denmark in October 1987. "There's a Danish saying, 'Denmark er en lille land,' which means, 'Denmark is a little country,' but the Danes do not have little hearts. The pride they have in their country and their concern about what happens in their country more than makes up for Denmark's lack of physical size."

Chrystal, 24, spent six months in Denmark under the International Four-H Youth Exchange program (IFYE) and experienced firsthand the Danish largeness of heart. She lived with four different families, three of them living on farms and one in a small town.

"The Danish people were very hospitable and friendly," Chrystal said. She attended dinners, birthday parties, a baptism and a funeral service with her host families. While visiting Kronborg Castle, Chrystal saw Princess Elizabeth, a member of the Danish royal family.

"There was no advance notice that she would be there, no special guards, no secret service agents," Chrystal related. "Even though everyone knew who she was, no one bothered her. She received no special treatment. She was showing her guests part of her country's history, just as my host familily was showing me. She acted like an ordinary citizen."

All of Chrystal's host families included a 4-H member of junior leader. At least one family member was required to speak some English. With the town family, that was no problem. Both parents spoke English because they needed it in their professions. None of the farm family parents spoke English except one of the mothers, who knew a little bit. Students in Denmark start learning English in fifth grade, so the children of the host families could communicate with her somewhat.

"Danish is a difficult language to learn," Chrystal said, "and I don't learn languages easily, but I still tried. sometimes I felt like a broken record, but the way to learn a language is to hear the same words again and again."

One method Chrystal used to learn Danish was to watch films on television. Many of the films were made in English and had Danish subtitles printed on the screen. "I was pretty quick at matching the English words with their Danish equivalents," she said. Some films spoken in Danish also had Danish subtitles because of the various dialects in Denmark, and this was also helpful. She also watched the nightly news which, although it was never subtitled, was a good way to learn correct pronunciation.

The daughter of Gerald and Jean Reichard of Waynesboro, Chrystal graduated from the University of Scranton with a degree in physical therapy. She worked as a physical therapist in Johnstown before taking the trip to Denmark, she toured the physical therapy unit of a hospital and found it comparable to what she was accustomed to in the U.S. A 4-H member since 1972, she grew up on a pig farm.

Because of her farm background, Chrystal felt right at home with the Danish farm families. An average farm in Denmark is about 200 acres. Crops are mostly wheat and beets, with some rye, barley and oats. The growing season is too short for corn, so cows are fed sugar beets, turnips and hay. The hay, which is made into ensilage, is not alfalfa but grass

Production on Danish dairy farms is controlled by a quota system. The major breed of cows is Jersey, which the Danish call the Red Danish Milk Race. Holsteins, the second most popular breed, are called the Black and White Danish Milk Race. Danish farmers use some American bull genetics in their herds. On the farms where Chrystal stayed, cows were milked in a stanchion and pipeline set-up, and milk was picked up every day.

Most farms are handed down through several generations of a family.

Dairy promotion is strong in Denmark, Chrystal reported. Magazines carry many dairy ads. The 1986 World Cup Soccer Champions were from Denmark and were partially sponsored by the country's dairies. They had a picture of a cow on their uniforms.

The summer of 1987 was the wettest, coldest summer that Denmark had experienced in a long time. Normally, summer temperatures are in the 90's, but that summer the temperature barely got into the 70's. Average summer and winter temperatures in Denmark are 3° - 4° lower than in the U.S.

Despite the damp weather and the difficulty of the langauage, Chrystal saw much of the country and spoke with many people. She visited elementary, high schools and post-secondary schools, usually as part of the students' English lesson. The session consisted of a question and answer period conducted entirely in English. "The younger kids asked me about things they had seen on American TV shows — 'Is it true or just a TV Show?' was the kind of question I usually got."

The older students and adults asked her about politics, such as how the government and school systems in the U.S. differed from theirs.

"I stayed as middle-of-the-road as I could, in answering their questions," Chrystal said. "They were strong in their beliefs, and they challenge their government as much as we do." There are forty recognized political parties in Denmark, with eight strong enough to have seats in Parliament. Danish TV consists of one channel, which is government controlled. There are no ads.

Government programs are numerous in Denmark. The country has socialized medicine, for example, in which an individual's medical care from birth to death is provided free of charge. Unemployment is very low.

Denmark has a vast network of public transporation. All the families Chrystal stayed with lived close to bus stops, and three of them were within easy walking distance of a train station. Busses and trains run frequently, seven days a week, and on time. The cost is reasonable. A five hour train trip through Denmark cost her about $25, which included a reserved seat in second class and the fare for the one-hour ferry ride across the Great Belt — the body of water separating the two major islands of Denmark.

Auto transportation, however, is a different matter, Applicants for a driver's license must be 18, and must take driving lessons, which are expensive. Gasoline, called benzin, sells for 89¢ a liter, which translates to about $3.50 a gallon. "It's no wonder there are a lot of bicycles and mopeds," she said.

Chrystal saw a 1983 Ford advertised for 49,500 crowns — about $7000.

"If you keep all this in mind, it's easier to understand how three kilometers (two miles) is easy walking distance, and 40 kilometers (25 miles) is a major trip," Chrystal said.

"One thing I learned quickly about the Danish people is their concepts of travel and distances. At home, I never thought too much about jumping into my car and driving, by myself, the hundred miles between where I lived in Johnstown and my parents home in Waynesboro: Here, in this part of Denmark, you simply don't do that," Chrystal wrote from Denmark.

"Perhaps I have taken transportation for granted. The concept of two and three car families is hard for the Danes to understand. Although I already knew it, the Danes' view reinforces how wasteful 'riding the circuit' is. When the topic arises, I find myself making excuses for the American way rather than finding good reasons. We have the alternatives of car pools, bicycles, mopeds, and walking; if only our lifestyles would allow."

Chrystal found some differences not only in transportation but also in the food. The Danes eat five to six times a day. "You can expect to eat every three to four hours — the three main meals plus coffee breaks. Instead of getting a cup of coffee and whatever," she wrote. " 'Morning coffee' may be a part of breakfast or is served after fist milking. It generally includes bread or rolls, buttered and topped with cheeses, jams or honey."

The coffee is much stronger than American coffee. "You stay awak all day," she said. The adults drank tea and coffee while the children had milk. Often coffee was the only beverage served with a meal. "I had to learn to drink it," Chrystal said.

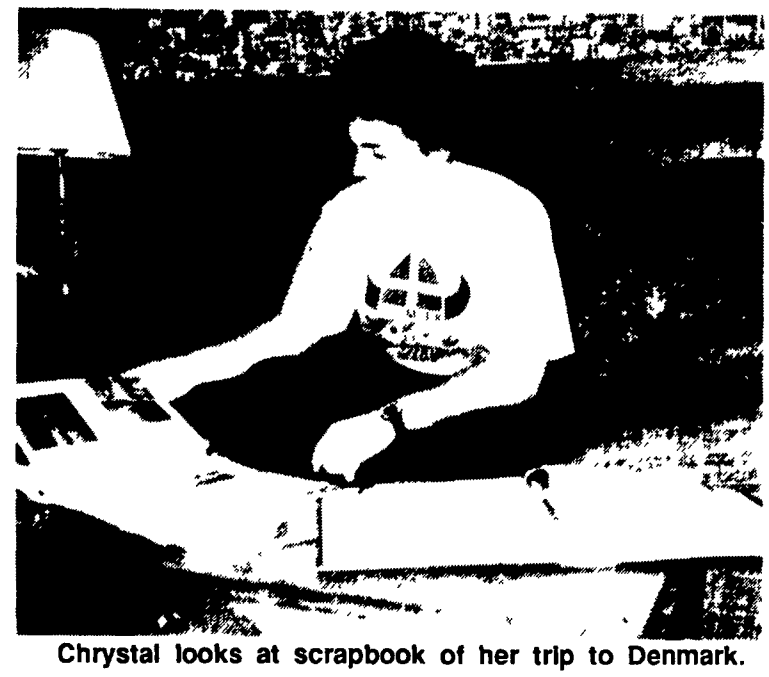
Chrystal did share one item of American food with her hosts. While the Danish eat hamburgers, the American-style burger is unknown. Hamburgers in Denmark are served open-faced and eaten with a knife and fork. They are topped with sliced piickled red beets and sliced fresh cucumbers. Chrystal made her host family an American-style burger "with the works" and showed them how to eat it with their hands. "They liked it," she said, "but then whet back to their way."

There were lots of food Chrystal had never tasted before, "but nothing I hadn't at least heard of. Did you know there are at least twenty ways to prepare boiled potatoes? They can be buttered and sprinkled with parsley, or covered with brown sauce, white sauce, mustard sauce, carrot and pea sauce, garlic sauce, etc." The meals with the farm families were mostly meat prepared in familiar ways — pork chops, sausage — and those boiled potatoes. The family in town ate more American-style foods — chicken, rice, fish, scalloped and baked potatoes. When in doubt about how to eat a food, Chrystal "copied what everyone else did."

The first thing she wanted to eat on return to the U.S. was a huge fresh salad. Although greens are used in Danish cooking, they are usually on sandwiches, not served as a separate dish.

Chrystal plans on keeping in touch with the families she stayed with, and expects to return to Denmark "as soon as I can. I have seen just enough to know I want to see and experience more. Each family has told me, 'You should see...' and I answered, "Next time, next time."

Information on participating in the IFYE program is available from: National 4-H Council, International Programs, 7100 Connecticut Avenue, Chevy Chase, MD 20815. The program is open to young adults 15-25 for both long term (six months) and short term (six weeks) visits. One-third of the cost of Chrystal's trip was funded by the national 4-H organization and donations by corporations. The rest was raised locally by clubs, organizations and the county 4-H All IFYE participants are required to give ten presentations about their visit after they return.



Chrystal looks at scrapbook of her trip to Denmark.

Chrystal holds a Danish flag apron given to her by one of her host families. The decanter is hand-blown glass, made in a factory near Copenhagen.

Stoltzfus Farm Turns Into Birthing Center

BY SALLY BAIR
Lancaster Co. Correspondent

ELIZABETHTOWN — Frank Stoltzfus is never surprised when his ewes give birth to triplets, but he was very surprised on Saturday when he had two ewes give birth to nine lambs.

The first ewe, a Finn Dorset Hamp cross, gave birth without any difficulty to quads early in the day. Stoltzfus says he remembers thinking, "This is new. I never had four born before." This was the ewe's fourth birthing.

That ewe's mother then began giving birth. Stoltzfus says, "I was there for the second one, but she began pawing again. She was really big so I wasn't surprised when she had a third one." He was disappointed, however, because the third lamb weighed in at less than three pounds. Soon, there was evidence that she still wasn't done lambing, and she went on to give birth to two more. This was the seventh or eighth birthing for the ewe, affectionately known to the family as Lemon Drop, and she has always had multiple births, usually triplets, according to Stoltzfus.

Irene and Frank Stoltzfus help these four 48-hour-old lambs pose with their mother. The Finn Dorsett cross actually had five live births, but the smallest lamb did not survive. The ewe's daughter gave birth to quads on the same day.

It was a busy day for Stoltzfus, who was attending the lambing alone without the help of his wife Irene and two children, Jessica, 7, and Jason, 10. They were all visiting Irene's parents, and when they got the call about the nine births, the children wanted to get home quickly.

Stoltzfus says, "I was cleaning off eight lambs and getting them nursing." The ninth, tiny lamb did not survive, but the others all weighed in between seven and eight pounds, and seemed to be doing nicely. The two smallest, one from each ewe, were taken into the Stoltzfus home and bottle fed colostrum to help them get off to a good start.

Stoltzfus said he had to solicit frozen colostrum from a neighbor to help out with the newborns.

Lambing started in this 38-sheep flock on January 13, in the middle of Farm Show week, and with the first eight ewes that lambed they are at a 300 percent lamb crop. Stoltzfus says it is usual to have a 150 percent crop, adding, "We haven't had less than that yet."

The Stoltzfus family began raising sheep in 1980, and sell almost all their lamb crop as spring market lambs. What are not sold are finished out for later sale.

Jason is a 4-H'er who has shown his sheep at Elizabethtown, Denver and Manheim Fairs, showing the reserve grand champion market lamb at Manheim in 1986. He has purebred Suffolks.

Too young for 4-H, Jessica shows in the open classes, and had the reserve grand champion market lamb at Elizabethtown this year. She owns three purebred Dorsets.

Stoltzfus has liked the results of his Finn Dorset crossbreds, and he said the purebred Finns are known for their multiple births. The Dorset, he said, is known as a good mother breed, and good for breeding out of season. The combination may be responsible for the high number of multiple births they are experiencing.

County Agent Chester Hughes agreed that multiple births out of a Finn cross can be expected.

Stoltzfus works as crops foreman for Masonic Homes in Elizabethtown. He stresses that his high-lambing flock is not made up of high priced ewes. "We started with 15, which we bought as lambs." He said it has been a good family project, helping to teach the children responsibility.

And except for lambing, especially days when nine are born, the sheep do not require a lot of attention as they are being raised.

Queen. She entered the competition already wearing the crown as queen of Sinking Valley Fair, Blair County.

Chosen runner-up from among 19 contestants was Elizabeth L'nore Finn, 18, of Dallas, queen of the Luzerne County Fair.

Dippery's fair experience has been somewhat unique. She erected her school's Key Club exhibit at the Sinking Valley event and also worked as a first aid nurse at the fairgrounds.

The daughter of Dr. Lee and Mrs. Joyce Dippery, the senior at Tyrone Area High School said she'd apply her $1000 scholarship prize to studies at Penn State University, which she'll undertake next fall. She plans to study plant science.

In high school, the new queen is a member of Key Club, Science Club, National Honor Society and is chairman of her senior class and a cheerleader.

Dippery attributed her interest in her local fair and much of the credit for her crowning to Sara and Frank Long who accompanied her to the 76th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs, held at the Greentree Marriott here. Long is president of Sinking Valley Fair.

In relinquishing her crown, 1987 Queen Jill Romesburg, representing Somerset County Fair, offered Dippery "Best wishes for the best job you'll ever love." Romesberg, in summarizing her year's reign, noted that she'd attended 12 fairs, four festivals, eight parades; traveled 3,500 miles; appeared twice on television and twice on radio; was featured in 10 newspaper stories; took 350 photographs; had her gowns cleaned 15 times; wore out four pairs of shoes traipsing across fairgrounds, and received one proposal of marriage.

Judges for this year's competition were Beverly Minor, Charles Wismer and Nancy Hogg, who evaluated the young women based on personal interviews, written essays and speeches; in the speeches the contestants told judges why they should attend the entrants' particular fair. Emerson Suder was queen contest committee chairman.

In various communications' divisions judging, Washington County Fair gathered four wins, as well as the judges' concensus for the over-all prize. Accepting the honors for Washington County was Patty McMurray who also chaired a convention round table, "Creating a Better Community Image."

Divisions and their winners, in descending order, included:

Premium book-- Big Butler Fair, West End Fair, Jefferson County Fair.

Scrapbook-- Hookstown Fair, Venango County Fair, Indiana County Fair, plus honorable mentions to Washington County, Reading and Fayette County.

Publicity material-- Washington County Fair, York International Fair, Hookstown Fair.

Slide set-- Washington County Fair, Indiana County Fair, Hookstown Fair.

Non-commercial video-- Hookstown Fair, Bedford County Fair, Somerset County Fair.

Commercial video-- Washington County Fair.

John Holbert was communications contest chairman.

Other queen contestants and the fairs they represented included:

Sandra Michaels of Vintondale, Cambria County; Jill Swanson of Russell, Warren County; Nicole Richards of Bradford, McKean County; Dorie Matscherz of Prosperity, Green County; Cindy McClellan of Sycamore, Jacktown.

Cindy Rearick of Dawson, Dawson Grange; Suzan Feldbauer of St. Marys, Elk County; Susie Murphy of Wattsburg, Wattsburg; Kallie Hanby of Emlenton, Venango County; Jamie Marie Mason of White Mills, Greene Dreher Sterling; Beth Sisley of Linesville, Linesville; Tracey Ann Hughes of Hookstown, Hookstown.

Shannon Petenbrink of Garrett, Somerset County; Judy Rohrer of Lancaster, West Lampeter; Melanie Rohrer of Manheim, Manheim Community; Amanda Beth Rhone of Dillsburg, Dillsburg Farmers; Deborah Townsend of McClellandtown, Fayette County.

Nineteen young women representing their county and community fairs vied for the title of Pennsylvania Farm Queen. Selected at the 76th annual convention of the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs was Joy Kirsten Dippery of Tyrone, queen, and Elizabeth L'nore Finn of Dallas, Pa., runner-up.

Kids Help Fight Leukemia

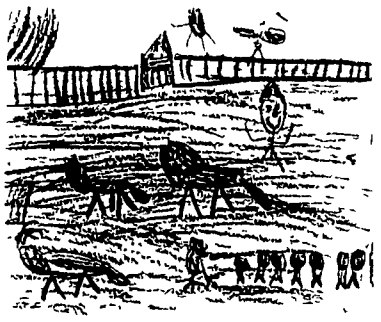
On December 19, 1987, an employee of the Warrenton, Virginia, Farm Credit office, lost her son to leukemia.

Children of employees at the Farm Credit District headquarters in Baltimore, were asked to prepare drawings of banking or farming subjects for a "Farm Credit Kid's Calendar," to honor the memory of Jeff Orrison.

Material for the calendars and all layout and reproduction costs were donated by the Banks. The calendars will be offered for sale at $1.00 each. Every dollar in its entirety will be donated to the Leukemia Society in Jeff's name.

Although the Banks employ over 800 people in five states and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, they consider themselves to be a "family." The Banks are totally owned by their borrowers. You must be a farmer or borrower to sit on the Board of Directors. All Senior Officers have farming backgrounds. It's that common bond that brings them all together. They are the largest agricultural lender in the mid-Atlantic region, making loans to rural home owners, acquatic harvesters and producers, farmers and ag-related businesses.

You may purchase a calendar at any Farm Credit office, or contact the headquarters at (301) 628-5500.



Jessica Sayler, 12, is one of the artists whose drawings are featured on the Farm Credit Kid's Calendar. The calendar is dedicated to Jeff Orrison who lost his battle with leukemia one week before Christmas.

SLICK CONCRETE CAN BE ROUGHENED
SCABBLING is an effective way to avoid unnecessary losses of cattle. The SCABBLER makes bands about two inches wide approximately 1/8" to 3/16 in. depth. This gives sufficient area for good footing while allowing you to scrape the smooth surface as before. It is near enough to the surface to give your cows full advantage of the roughness and deep enough to remain effective for years. It greatly aids in heat detection.
And the good news is that it is reasonably priced. You have the choice of doing it yourself or having us do it for you. We offer service right to your door. Call us for more details.

Mifflin County Dairy Farm

Operating dairy farm for sale in Lewistown, R.D. 1, area. Owners health is main reason for decision to sell property. The farm is located on a paved road in Ferguson Valley, 4 miles from Lewistown, 30 miles from Penn State. There are 142 acres on the farm with 100-plus of them tillable and 28 pasture. The balance are in woodlands and building sites. There is a stream running on each side of the farm. The main barn and house are on the paved road with easy access to the milk house.

Buildings include a two story dairy barn with 34 stalls and two box stalls downstairs. The box stalls, and adjoining feed room could be easily expanded to include eight to ten more cow stalls. The second story has laminated rafters so the hay mow is a clear span. There is a complete hay conveying system in place. There is also a two story 36'x72' bank barn with heifer and dry cow pens. The dairy barn has a pipeline milker, gutter cleaner, a 12' by 36' milk house, and a 600 gallon bulk tank. Two stave silos are 12' by 45' and a 18' by 50'. There are several outbuildings that serve as machinery storage.

An excellent spring and two wells provide water for the farm and residence.

The farm house is a two story, 10 room, newly remodeled with 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, aluminum siding, storm windows, and insulation. The heating system is oil fired hot water. Wall to wall carpet throughout. Two bow windows, sliding glass door and stone fireplace with stove insert.

A trailer pad with septic and well is also part of farm.

The present owner rents land that would be available to a new owner.

Shown by appointment only.

Father And Daughter Team Up For Dairy Success

BY LOU ANN GOOD

COCHRANVILLE — One hundred and fourteen acres of prime farmland stretches toward the woodlands that form Timberview Farm's boundaries. Ben and Erma Kauffman own the Chester County farm, but it's their daughter Jeannette Brooks who nurtured their Holsteins to a 4 per cent high butterfat test herd.

"I've got good help," Ben said as he pointed with pride toward his middle daughter. "She knows what she's doing."

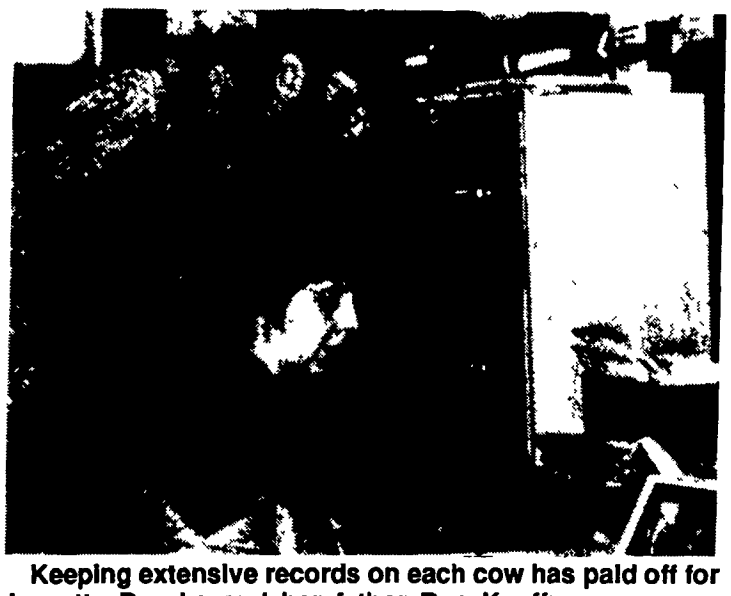
Although married to David Brooks and the mother of a three-year-old, Jeanette travels daily from her Parkesburg home to the farm homestead where she continues the work she loves best—dairy farming. There, Jeanette oversees the feeding and breeding of the farm's 60 milking cows and 50 heifers. Jeanette owns 26 of the cows and 20 of the heifers. She's especially proud of her cow that earned an excellent classification.

Ben attributes Jeanette's successful breeding implementation to her studious research. He says, "Jeanette reads 'Sire Summary' religiously."

But Jeanette protests, "Not really religiously." She pauses, then adds, "I have a lot of luck."

Her luck started early in her life. When she was 13-years-old, she won a heifer that eventually produced three sets of twins and a total of 14 heifers. Throughout the years, Jeanette has increased and improved her stock by using her own cows and choosing highly rated bulls for sires.

But Jeanette's dairy accomplishments were not won without some pain. She recalls that the first year she showed a cow in 4-H competition, she ended up in last place and shed some tears. The following year she tried again and won a red ribbon. Jeanette no longer bothers to show cows in competition although she knows they are good enough to garner awards. She explained, "I think classified standing is more important than placing in shows."



Keeping extensive records on each cow has paid off for Jeanette Brooks and her father Ben Kauffman.

In between pampering her cows, Jeanette finds time to look at the tractor pictures with her son Keith, 3. Jeanette and her husband David are expecting their second child in February.

To reach classified status, Jeanette studies the DHIA reports and stresses that anyone interested in improving their herd needs to do likewise.

Ben said, "Jeanette culls harder than I would. But I let her make most of the decisions because she's been so successful.

Jeanette has sold her cows to Korea, China, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Canary Islands and other countries. She said, "Each year, I pick our bottom six heifers but they are still good enough to qualify for the strict requirements in selling overseas stock. We send as few cows for beef as possible."

Both Ben and Jeanette attribute part of their success to good Surge equipment, cleanliness and the same person milking daily. More importantly, Jeanette records how much feed and the milk production of each cow. She said, "I keep a file on each cow and write lists for vets. Recording helps a lot because we tend to forget things."

Apparently, her diligence pays off because she said, "It's rare that our herd gets sick or has mastitis."

Like many farmers, Ben and Jeanette find machinery breakdowns one of the most frustrating problems to deal with in farming. Ben said, "You can buy a new piece of machinery and in three or four years it's old and outdated. Last summer, a piece of equipment needed a small part during haymaking. "The hay lay in the field for two weeks while we waited for the part and there was absolutely nothing we could do about it."

But Ben and Jeanette don't waste much time worrying over problems they can't solve. Instead, they concentrate on making a dif-

(Turn to Page C4)

An innovative farmer, Ben designed these heifer stalls so that the pipes could be latched to hold the heifer in position for such activities as dehorning and giving them shots. His daughter Jeanette excells in breeding to built up their herd.

ference where they can. Like improving milk production by trying different feed. This year, Jeanette decided to do something different by feeding the cows roasted soybeans. Each cow's production went up rather than down. Jeanette said, "One thing for sure, we're continuing soybean feeding four times daily to the top cows."

Is the real Abe Lincoln alive? "Yes," answers Ben Kauffman, "although he did shrink a little after being stuck in an underground box for over 100 years."

Since Kauffman resembles the former Civil War president, he entertains groups with an Abe Lincoln monologue. Kauffman customizes his 40 minute speeches to reflect the interests of his audience. "If it's a Boy Scout group, I talk about Abe's childhood; a Valentine's banquet concentrates on his romance and DHIA banquet-goers hear about Abe's farm background." To prepare for his speeches, Kauffman does his own research from his extensive library of books on Abe Lincoln.

Jeanette and Ben say their attitude toward farming is different from most other farmers. "We aren't interested in expanding our operation. We only want to do what we are doing better." Jeanette said, "We're interested in quality, not quantity."

She sees her wishes coming to fulfillment since they have raised their dairy herd's milk production from 334 pounds of milkfat to 400 pounds and milk production is up 800 pounds.

"Years ago, we didn't know the potential cows had." Ben said, "You can make money in farming if you do everything right. We need the best forage, the best bulls and cows with good udders and good feet and the best feed."

Since 1973, Ben's wife Erma works parttime as a tour guide for Lancaster County tourists and she is a Tupperware dealer. Erma said, "Farming has changed a lot. She recalled that life on the farm used to be a lot more hectic when her husband hauled fertilizer while Erma and their sons did the farm work.

Ben said, "In the evening I wanted to relax, but the dealers would call and I was constantly under pressure to get more done." Ben said, "We aren't working like we did years ago." I get a neighbor to plant and harvest corn. In the spring, we fill silo.

Erma said, "The smartest thing we ever did was put in a pipeline and two Harvestors. It was a big investment, but it made things so much easier for us."

During silage filling, Jeanette drives the chopper and Ben drives the wagons. To save time, they mow but do not rake the hay. Ben joked, "I always say, we're lazy farmers, we try to do the least we can."

Jeanette inserted, "We want to enjoy farming so we don't go through a lot of unnecessary steps by trying to do too much—that brings a lot of stress."

Ben explained, "I'm old enough to retire so I work at my own pace." Consequently they are strong advocates of no-till farming which they maintain is easier, quicker and better for the land."

Whether it's time to clean-up, milk or feed, Jeanette enjoys it all. "I always loved cows," she said.

Both Jeanette and Ben state that despite their laid-back work habits, farming seems to be paying off for them. Their herd has earned a high classification and their output has increased and two years ago, Ben earned the top Chester County award and placed sixth in the state for hay of 7.9 tons per acre.

Ben is proud of their good soil which he boasts doesn't need much rain for a good corn crop since it's the best soil in the country. He hates to see development enroachment on the land. As a planning commissioner, Ben says, "Everyone wants to preserve soil but no one wants the other person to do it."

With all their devotion to farming, both father and daughter find time for other activities. Besides being a planning commissioner, Ben serves as chairman of the local Agway, is on the MCC Board of Directors and a Sunday School teacher.

Jeanette is secretary of the Octararo Young Farmers Association. She is treasurer of her church's Women's Missionary Service Committee.

"I'm different," Jeanette said. "I'm usually the only women who attends meetings about dairy nutrition, but it doesn't bother me. I'm interested in the information. Apart from classes, Jeanette feels that experience is the best teacher.

Jeanette would love to take over the farm some day, but the possibility seems faint since she has other brothers and sisters and the price of farms continue to rise. In the meantime, she is concentrating on building equity with high pedigreed stock and enjoying it.

Toy Tractor Show And Sale Held

BY SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent

WESTMINSTER — Over 800 toy tractor enthusiasts attended the first annual Central Maryland Toy Tractor Show and Sale in Westminster on Saturday, January 23. Organizers of the event were Chuck Reese, Eddie Dutterer and Tim Talbert.

"We were really surprised at the turnout," commented Talbert. "It was a right nice show." The Carroll County farmer reported that there were 70 display and sale tables in the Ag Center that drew a steady crowd to the day long event.

Representative prices for the affair ranged from $150 to $200 for International Harvester 856 and 806 tractors respectively. Others were priced lower and higher according to condition and model year, with most prices in the $45 to $80 range for tractors and trucks.

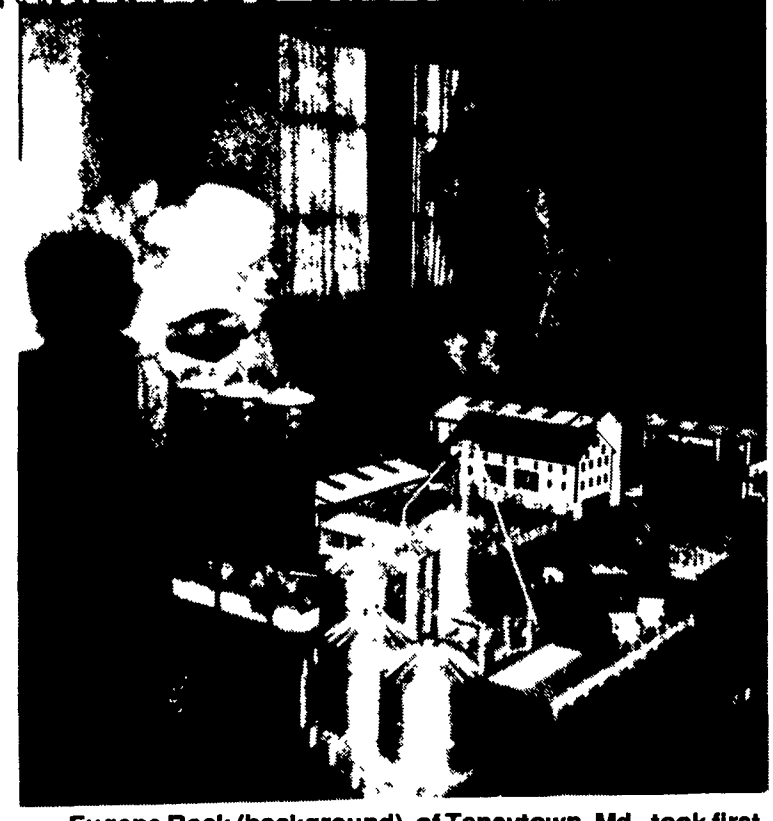
Talbert reported that the evening auction of selected items brought a bid of $270 for a Webber custom made New Idea two row pull type corn picker. A John Deere lawn and garden maintenance set, in the original box, brought $240.

Trophies were awarded to first, second and third place winners in the display competition. In the 1/16th scale division, Paul Lloyd of Upperco took first place. Byron Crouse of Taneytown, and Tommy Wiles of Keymar placed second and third, respectively.

Eugene Rock of Taneytown won first place in the 1/64th scale competition with his model of the ideal farm operation. His display, complete with barns and outbuildings of frame construction with real roof trusses, has taken first place at two previous shows. "We made some of the machinery from scratch," he explained. And how did he make the straw in the windrows look so real at scale? "We put wheat straw in the blender." The gates to the barn lot open, the bunker is full of silage and the slurry store has some real-looking brown stuff in it. Some of the bins and feeders are actually turned wood. And the ear corn in the corn crib is actually grains of rice painted yellow.

Bill Haines and Bob Hake took second and third places in the 1/64th category. The Best of Sale Tables award was presented to Tom Adams of Ohio.

Tim Talbert said he met many people who had "one or two toy tractors at home. Now they're going back and getting into collecting in a big way," he said. "It's a hobby that's growing every day."



Eugene Rock (background), of Taneytown, Md., took first place in the 1/64th scale division with this winning display.

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin County Correspondent

KAUFFMAN STATION - - Chrystal Reichard of Waynesboro gave her first presentation of "Six Months in Beautiful Denmark" at the Franklin County Cooperative Annual Meeting held at the Kauffman Comunity Center on January 22. Chrystal was Pennsylvania's only long-term 1987 International 4-H Youth Exchange participant.

In the business portion of the meeting, D. Eugene Gayman, Chambersburg, member of the Board of Trustees of Penn State University, thanked the Franklin County commissioners and the state representatives for their support of Extension. He also announced that state-wide there are 20,000 4-H leaders and 78,000 4-H members, including 6,000 in center city Philadelphia.

Approximately 275 people attended the meeting.

John Shearer, Extension Agent, recognized six people retiring from the Board of Directors after serving two three-year terms. Retiring directors receiving plaques for attending 85 percent or more of the board meetings were Linda Golden, 1987 President, and Wilma Wenger, Greencastle. Mrs. Wenger also served as chairperson for the Annual Meeting Committee. Fred Rice, Chambersburg, received a certificate for attending two-thirds or more of the meetings. Also retiring were Betty Mummert, Clifford Gayman, and Marie Starr, all of Chambersburg.

Patti Timmons, Alternate Dairy Princess, serves milk punch at Franklin County Extension Annual Meeting.

Shearer also made a special presentation to Richard Ezell, Director of the Franklin County Library, from the Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania State University College of Agriculture. He gave

Boost Ag Profitability

The University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service has just published a new Farm Account Book to help farmers improve their financial management skills. The publication helps the Extension Service carry out one of its state initiatives, "Enhancing Profitability of Maryland Agriculture," by recognizing the importance of sound financial management as the basis for farm operation success.

The Farm Account Book is designed to "help farmers gather all the information they need to make better business decisions," says Dr. Ralph J. Adkins, associate director for Extension's agricultural programs.

Other statewide efforts toward enhancing ag profitability include the hiring of two new regional farm management specialists; the purchase of new computers; FINPACK, an overall farm management aid package; and countywide workshops for farmers to be held throughout the state this winter.

All of these programs focus on helping farmers increase profits with better financial analysis and recordkeeping.

The Farm Account Book emphasizes the use of important financial forms such as net worth, income statement, projected cash flow and enterprise budgets, as well as the usual forms for recording income and expenses. As a special feature, the book also includes forms for keeping depreciation, amortization and depletion records.

Arranged in a durable loose-leaf binder, the Farm Account Book is easy to read and handle. Because of its removable pages, farmers can replace old forms as necessary, instead of replacing the whole book each year. It is priced at $9 per copy for Maryland residents. There is a $2.50 shipping charge for out-of-state orders.

The Maryland Cooperative Extension Service also has published a Field Record Book as part of its state initiatives program. This publication is a farmer's handbook for recording field facts and figures. In a handy pocket-size folder, it is a valuable asset to financial recordkeeping.

Persons interested in the Farm Account Book, the Field Record Book, or other agriculture profitability programs should contact their local county Extension office.

Milk Prices Affect Milk Production

by Jack J. Kirkland
Asst. Professor of Agricultural Economics

"Milk prices are going up, so milk production will increase." "Milk prices are going down and dairy farmers are going to increase milk production so they can maintain their gross net income and cash flow." I'm sure most of you have heard both statements. Which statement is true? Are they both true and does milk production increase regardless of what happens to milk prices? The answer is: it depends. Factors other than price changes also affect milk production.

Let's look at these factors and decide which of the previous statements, or both, is true. The other factors that affect milk production are the costs of inputs, changes in technology and management (i.e., better herd management, improved feeding management, breeding programs that genetically improve the quality of cow in the herd and better culling to improve the overall herd quality) and changes in profitability of competing enterprises.

When economics discuss the factors that affect milk production, they usually discuss the change in that particular factor with the other factors remaining unchanged. This is done for reasons of simplicity although, in actuality, more than one of these factors are likely to change at the same time. The net effect of the change depends on the magnitude and direction of each factor's influence on milk production.

Let's examine each factor's effect on milk production. When the costs of inputs decrease, with everything else remaining the same, the profitability of producing milk increases. Dairy farmers, when and if they can, usually respond to this increased profitability by increasing production since it would result in a higher net profit, and more available money to add to the stash in the bank. If decreases in the costs of inputs result in increased milk production, then it is logical that increases in the costs of inputs result in decreased milk production. Or is it? Increased input costs result in a decrease in profitability and a lower net income.

Changing technology allows a dairy farmer to be more efficient. That is, with better herd and feed management and an overall improvement in the herd quality accomplished through a breeding program and culling program, more units of milk are produced per unit of input. This increase in unit output per unit of input or the same output with less units of input is often called an increase in technical efficiency. This results in a higher level of profitability through the generation of higher gross revenues or lower production costs.

Changes in the profitability of competing enterprises is really not a factor in the dairy industry, at least in the short run. Milk production is not an enterprise in which a farmer can jump into and out of production like crop enterprises. There are large investments in fixed assets particular to the dairy industry that prevent the quick switch to another enterprise. Changes in long run profitability of competing enterprises may result in the long run changes in milk production. A quicker rate of exit and lower number of farmers entering the dairy industry would result if the profitability of dairy farming was consistently low compared to other farm enterprises.

Economic theory says that if all other things remaining unchanged, price increases usually result in an increase in milk production and price decreases usually result in decreases in milk production. Again, with the other factors remaining unchanged, a change in price affects the dairy farm's bottom line: profitability or net farm income. Increases in the price of milk mean a greater profitability or higher net farm income. Decreases in milk prices mean a lower profitability or lower net farm income.

It should be apparent that the previous discussion of each the factors affecting milk production consistently led to a common line: the effect of the change of those factors on the profitability of milk production. When several of the factors change simultaneously, the combined effects of these changes on profitability is what causes an increase or a decrease in milk production. When producing milk becomes more profitable, dairy farmers will want to produce more milk and make more money. If the profitability of milk production decreases, will dairy farmers then decrease milk production?

The previous argument assumes dairy farmers are profit maximizers. Some economists have recently proposed a theory that they may be revenue maximizers rather than profit maximizers. This theory assumes that dairy farmers are concerned with generating enough gross revenue to maintain a cash flow they feel that is necessary to adequately carry out the business and result in a desired standard of living for the family. Thus, if a decrease in price results in a decrease in gross revenues, some dairy farmer's initial reaction would be to increase production to maintain the gross revenue and the cash flow thought necessary for the needs of the farm and farm family. This is why some believe that the statement that prices are going down and dairy farmers are going to increase production is also true.

Suppose there is a decrease in milk prices, like the dairy industry has experienced with the $2 decrease in the support price of milk since 1983. Dairy farmers might increase their production in one of two instances. The first would be when there was a simultaneous and larger decrease in production costs as a result of lower input prices or an increase in efficiency resulting from better herd or feed management and/or improvement in the overall herd. In this case, the profitability increases even with a decrease in milk prices which would result in the desire to produce more milk and increase net profit.

In the other case in which there is no change in production costs, profitability decreases. Thus, a desire to maintain a certain level of gross income and net income might cause the dairy farmer to increase milk production. This desired level of income would be maintained by producing more hundredweights of milk to compensate for the reduction in the profitability per hundredweight. This may work in some cases and in some cases it might not.

An increase in milk production, if happening on all farms, will tend to drive the price of milk down, given that demand remains unchanged. If the dairy farmer

Farm Population Declines To 5.2 Million

WASHINGTON — Approximately 5,226,000 people lived on U.S. farms in 1986 (about 129,000 fewer than reported in 1985) according to a report released today by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service and the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of the Census.

About 1 of every 46 persons, or 2.2 percent of the nation's total population, and about 1 of every 12 rural residents, or 8.3 percent of the rural total of 63,133,000, lived on farms in 1986. The farm population consists of persons living on farms in rural areas of the country but excludes residents of the small number of farms in urban areas.

Half of all farm residents lived in the Midwest in 1986, compared with about one-third in 1950. The South's farm population has declined rapidly, from its one-half share of the farm resident total in 1950 to 29 percent in 1986.

At 97 percent, the farm population had a larger share of whites than the nonfarm population nationwide at 85 percent. Blacks comprised 2 percent of the farm population but 12 percent of the nonfarm population. Hispanics, who may be of any race, accounted for 2 percent of farm residents but 8 percent of nonfarm residents.

Farm residents included 110 males per 100 females in 1986, compared with just 93 males per 100 females in the nonfarm population.

Farm residents are older than the urban and total rural populations. Farm residents' median age was 37 years, exceeding 31.6 years for nonfarm residents. The median age of the urban population was 31.5 years in 1986, while the median age of the rural population was 32.4 years, both significantly lower than the farm population median of 37 years. In the 1920 Census when farm population data first were collected, farm residents' median age was 20.7 years, lower than that of the rural population, 22.5 years, or the urban population, 27.4 years.

Onyl 3 percent of the farm resident labor force was employed in 1986, compared with 7.2 percent of the nonfarm labor force. Although employed farm residents overall were about equally divided between agricultural and nonagricultural jobs, 61 percent of farm men worked in farm occupations while 75 percent of farm women held nonfarm jobs.

These data, derived from the Current Population Survey of the Bureau of the Census, are subject to sampling variability and errors of response, including underreporting and nonreporting. For more details on the farm population, see, "Farm Population of the United States: 1986, Series P-27, No. 60," released today by the Economic Research Service and the Bureau of the Census or phone Judith Kalbacher (ERS), 202-786-1534.

Regional distribution of population

	Total U.S.		Farm
	1986	1950	1986	1950
Northeast	20.8	26.1	6.2	7.8
Midwest	24.7	29.4	50.5	32.3
South	34.3	31.2	29.3	51.6
West	20.2	13.3	14.1	8.4

increases milk production and there is no further decrease in milk prices and production costs do not increase, gross and net income will probably increase. If either milk prices decrease and/or production costs increase, gross and net income will decrease and the goal of maintaining the desired standard of living by increasing milk production will not be achieved.

Furthermore, there are also other constraints that may prevent a dairy farmer from increasing milk production, at least in the short run. Dairy farms are like snowflakes in that each one is unique. Increases in milk production on a particular dairy farm may be prevented by physical constraints which limit the number of cows a farmer can milk. The number of cows the barn can hold, the amount of storage for feed, and the amount of land available to produce feed may limit the size of the herd. The availability of current labor and the ability to get and adequately pay for additional labor may also be a factor limiting herd expansion.

Larger herds require more hours to be spent on managerial activities and perhaps increased management skills. This may stretch current managerial capabilities beyond its limits and result in a loss in technical efficiency and may even result in an increase in the cost of production. The availability of money for purchase of cows to increase the herd or to purchase feed may also limit expansion. There is also a limit to achieving and increasing milk production by increasing the amount of feed fed to the cows. Improving the quality of the herd through the brreeding program takes time and would not result in a fairly quick production increase that may be desired.

When the changes in the factors affecting milk production result in an increase in profitability, total milk production will generally increase. When profitability decreases, total milk production generally decreases. The desire to maintain net income and a desirable standard of living may increase milk production even if profitability decreases but it will only work in some cases. On-farm limitations may prevent increases in milk production on farms even when the changes in the factors influencing milk production send the signals to increase production. Thus, the two quotes at the beginning may or may not be true depending on how the profitability of milk production is affected and the specific and unique situation on the individual farms.

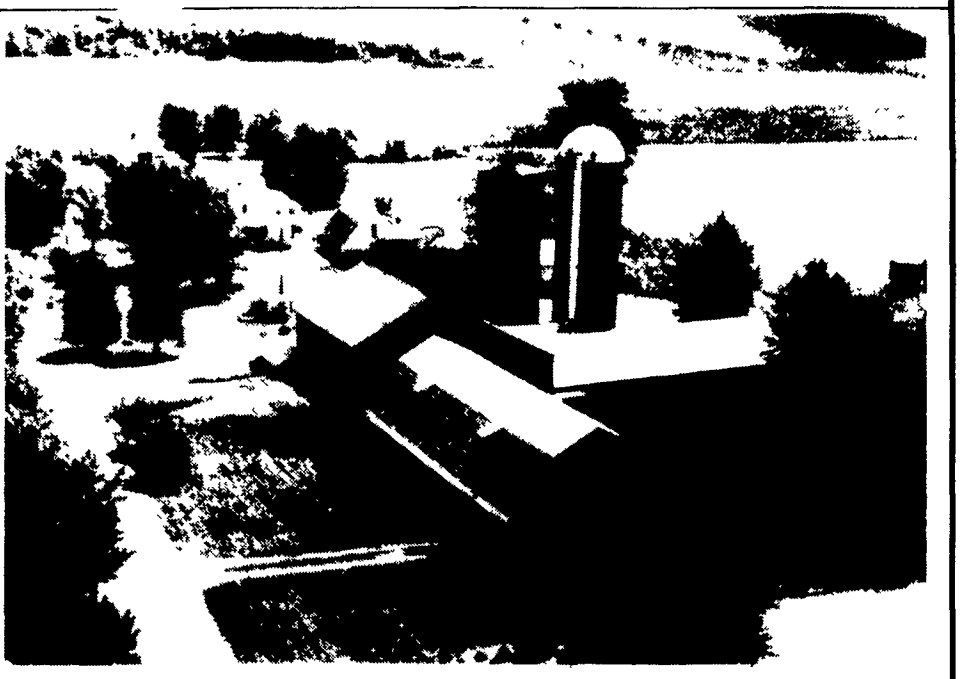
ENTER THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION PROGRAM NOW!

(Deadline April 15, 1988)

Beautiful Farmsteads...

A Positive Story



The Daniel Jones Farm, Stoneboro, Mercer county, was one of the nearly 100 farms so honored in 1987.

The Northeast is rightfully proud of its dairy industry. Agriculture is our number one industry, with milk its major commodity. Realizing dairying's importance to the area's economy, the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program (NEDFBP) was incorporated November 1983 to honor attractive dairy farms with the Dairy of Distinction Award.

The award program is based on the concept that these attractive farmsteads will enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, stimulate milk sales and encourage public support for the industry.

The NEDFBP has divided the Northeast into regions, with approximately the same number of farms per district. Each district is under the jurisdiction of a local committee responsible for organizing the judging, awarding the Dairy of Distinction signs and publicity. The program also operates on the regional level through the NEDFBP Board of Directors, which ovesee and provide support and guidance to the local communities. All active dairy farms within the region covered by the program are eligible to apply for a Dairy of Distinction award. Applications, available from the program's area secretary, the local committees and other sources such as agricultural publications, must be submitted by April 15 of each year.

Farm judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. This year in the Pennsylvania Program in addition to the district team of judges that does the roadside inspection, the sanitarian for your cooperative or dealer-handler will be asked to be part of the judging process. Winning farms receive a colorful, aluminum 18x24 inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed on the farmstead near the roadside so passers-by can recognize the farm as a Dairy of Distinction.

Dairy of Distinction farms will be judged every year to ensure they maintain the excellent standards required for the award.

This exciting program promotes agriculture at its best. Broad public awareness of the program is vital to its success and the impact will increase as more consumers see Dairy of Distinction farms and associate them with dairy products sold in stores.

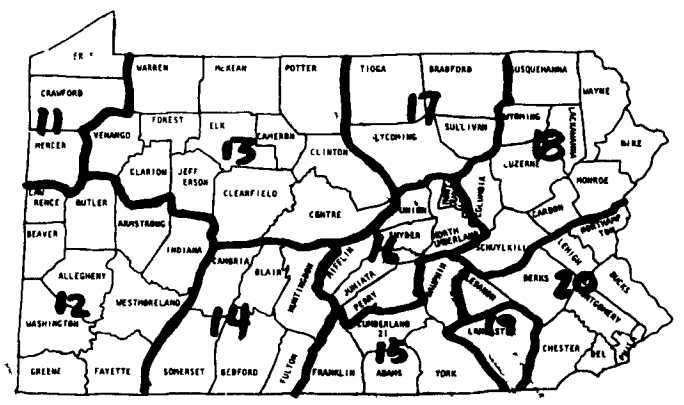
The Dairy of Distinction program is a cooperative, widespread industry effort. Sponsors include cooperative extension, agricultural cooperatives, State Departments of Agriculture, the Grange, Farm Bureau, producer groups and agribusinesses. Dairy of Distinction is a product of people who care about the Northeast dairy industry.

The NEDFBP extends an invitation to anyone interested in promoting beautiful dairy farms. Dairy of Distinction depends on people — particularly farmers who are proud of their farms and want to help the product they produce.

We love the Northeast — its lakes, hills, valleys, mountains, cities...and the beautiful Dairies of Distinction!

Dairy of Distinction
Dairy Farm Beautification Program

DAIRY OF DISTINCTION DISTRICTS



Pennsylvania Is Divided Into These Districts. Approximately 10 Dairy Of Distinction Awards will be made each year in each district. There is no cost to you. You receive a nice metal sign to put at the end of your lane and a certificate. In addition Lancaster Farming will present this year's winners from Pennsylvania with a color photograph made from a color slide. This year in the Pennsylvania Program in addition to the district team of judges that does the roadside inspection, the sanitarian for your cooperative or dealer-handler will be asked to be part of the judging process. If your farm is a winner be sure you or your district committee takes a color photograph of your farm and sends it to Lancaster Farming in time for the awards ceremony.

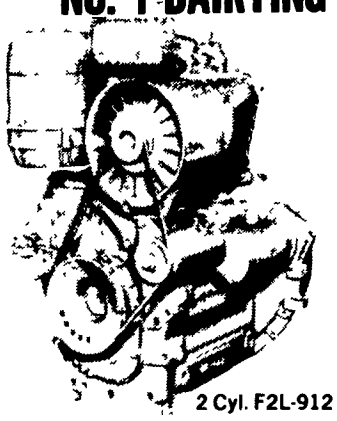
NO. 1 DAIRYING DIESEL



2 Cyl. F2L-912

KHD DEUTZ

Since 1968 F2L-912 diesels have earned the reputation as the most reliable diesel. Don't settle for less.

EASIER STARTING: Heavy flywheel provides easy starting. No electric heater plugs.

QUIETER: Runs quieter than most water cooled diesels. Very quiet exhaust.

Continuous Duty Rating:
26.5 HP @ 1800 RPM

Fewer repair parts than comparable three-cylinder diesels - cheaper to overhaul.

It has direct injection, lube oil cooling, and oil cooled pistons. This engine has proven to survive the extreme heat of a heavy load in a small engine house better than any other engine.

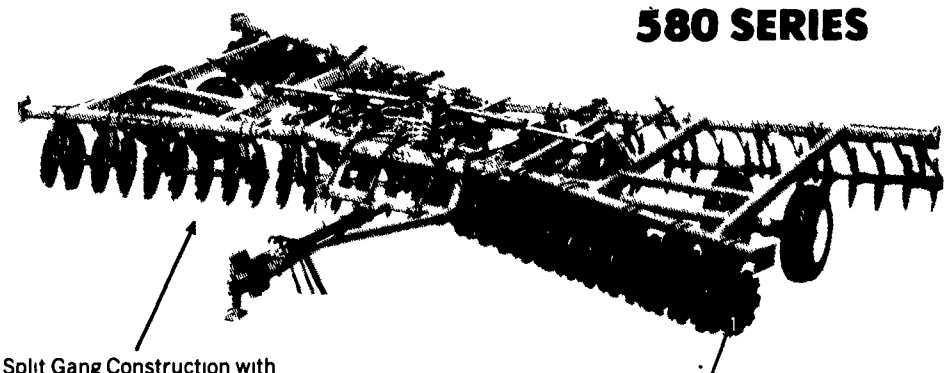
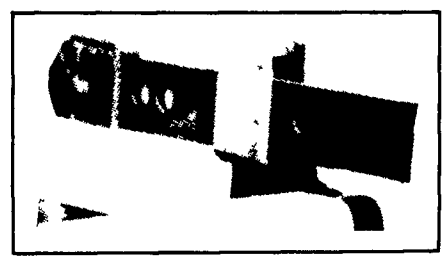
580 SERIES



Split Gang Construction with more bearings eliminates axle stretch due to excessively long axles

1-1/8" or 1½" square axles and split gangs give ample strength and durability



Adjustable depth control holds the cutting depth constant Then simply lock bar for transport to eliminate wear and tear on hydraulic transport cylinders on those rough and rocky roads

Positive adjustment leveling from front to rear is no problem Weight is shifted by these Spring Rods to produce a smooth finish

12'9" TRANSPORT WIDTH

17'5" to 31'4" CUTTING WIDTHS

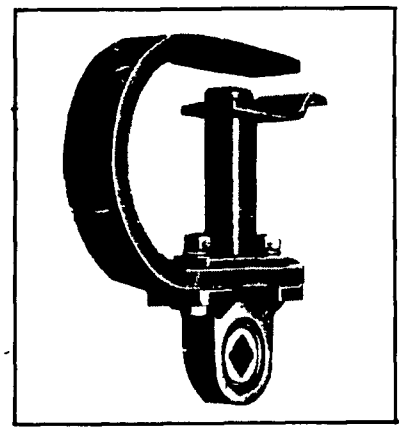
Floating action of hydraulic cylinder bracket allows wings to flex, plus wing wheel axle connectors adjust for leveling wings



FLEXIBILITY

Spring Bearing Hangers With Built-In Limiters Absorb Shocks But Don't Flex So Far That They Break!

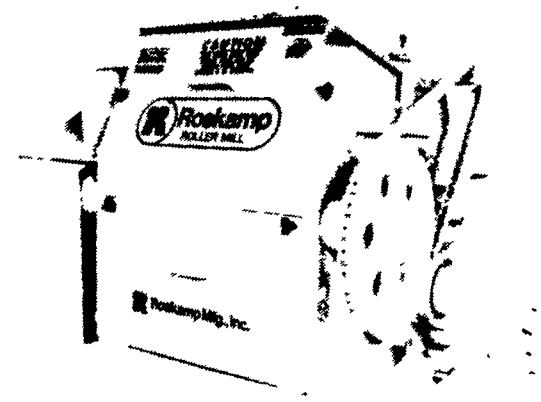
ROSKAMP STATIONARY CORN SILAGE ROLLER MILL



FOR DAIRY
Rolling silage fresh — just before feeding — increases milk production.

FOR BEEF
Less silage is required per pound of gain when silage is freshly rolled before feeding.

FOR HOGS
Freshly rolled silage, with all kernels cracked and all cobs crushed provides a highly palatable and more readily assimilated feed for sows.

DUAL PURPOSE
Ht-moisture or dry shelled corn can be metered into the Roskamp Silage Mill Hopper along with the silage for a uniformly mixed and digestible ration.

University tests have proven that 20% of high moisture whole corn passes through the animal's system undigested. This means evern fifth scoopful of expensive grain is left on your feedlot!

That's why it's money in the bank to freshly roll every bit of high moisture or dry corn just before feeding. Freshly rolled feed is the most palatable and digestible.

Lititz Firm Dominates Egg Competition At Farm Show

HARRISBURG — R.W. Sauder dominated the Farm Show egg competition winning 12 out of 14 classes. For the past six years, the firm has won enough blue ribbons each year to win a purple ribbon, with this year being no exception. In addition, the Lititz firm took home five plaques: four company awards and one producers award.

R.W. Sauder, who gives credit to its farmers who contribute high-quality eggs, was one of several competitors who won a Superior Quality Award. They also had the show's best dozen brown eggs, best 5 dozen brown eggs, and best 5 dozen eggs in the commercial class.

Esbenshade Farms in Mount Joy was another Superior Quality Award winner. Esbenshade brought the competition's best five dozen white eggs and one dozen white eggs.

Other winners in the egg competition were Vernon Yoder, Nine Points, best dozen eggs in farmers class; Barry Givens, W. Wyoming, best five dozen eggs in farmers class; Hi-N-Lite Farms, Tamaqua, best dozen eggs in broken-out quality class; Donald Henry, Millersville, best dozen eggs in junior class; and Superior Quality Award winners: Hi-N-Lite Farms, Tamaqua; Eldon Lehman, Manheim; Plain & Fancy Egg Ranch, Elizabethtown; Red Wing Farms, Fleetwood; and Vernon Yoder, Nine Points.

Champion Steer - Champion Carcass!

Hats off to Joshua Cowell, the 10-year-old Greene County 4-H boy who exhibited the 1,280-pound grand champion steer at the 1988 Pennsylvania Farm Show. Not only did he take home a record prize on the $13.50 per pound bid of Danny Georges' Foodliner in Bethlehem, but Joshua proved to be a good cattle feeder, too. A recent inspection of the grand champion steer's carcass by Penn State Extension livestock and meats experts revealed a champion carcass as well. There may have been better carcasses among the steers shown, however, the 880-pound carcass of the champion had a 15.7 square inch loin eye, 65 inches of fat, a yield grade of 2 and a low choice quality grade. By today's industry standards, the champ's carcass is perfectly acceptable. I'll admit that the carcass was somewhat on the heavy side and less fat may be more desirable, but it's not easy to estimate carcass traits in a live animal show. The committee of Penn State specialists were generally pleased with the quality of the carcasses of 11 steers purchased by Danny George. So much for the myth that Farm Show champion steers don't grade!

Biosecurity The Topic Of Beef Producers Meeting

BY BONNIE BRECHBILL
Franklin County Correspondent

SHIPPENSBURG — "Biosecurity" was the key word at the Franklin/Cumberland Beef Producers meeting held at Shippensburg Junior High School January 19.

"Biosecurity" is a new term," Dr. Thomas Drake, Penn State extension veterinarian said. "We want to get you to look at disease in a different perspective, to broaden the concept of 'herd'. Think of the whole environment. If you are going to prevent disease, you must keep away from your animals all the biological organisms that can harm them.

"Think about animals you bring into your herd -- are they bringing disease along? You may bring in a disaster. When you go to a show, think about mixing your animals with other animals that may be carrying disease organisms."

Dr. Drake acknowledged the impossibility of allowing only sterilized trucks onto the farm, but suggested that a truck delivering animals not be allowed to back up to the barn. "Unload those animals in a corner of the pasture," he said. "Don't back the truck up to the barn, let the end gate down and spill some of the manure from the truck into the barn."

He also suggested keeping a pan of disinfectant available. Visitors can clean their boots in it if they have just come from another farm.

Dr. Drake also discussed pregnancy checking in beef cattle. "A herd of 100 cows can be pregnancy checked for the cost of feeding one open cow through the winter," he said. He estimated the cost for pregnancy checking at $2 a head. "You can save yourself a lot of bucks," he added.

Disease is a problem of the whole herd, not just one animal. "If one animal develops a disease, how many others are marginal or on the edge?" he asked. A disease outbreak is an economic loss. "Prevent disease, don't treat it," he stressed. "Develop a program that's right for you."

Dr. Drake gave several suggestions for preventing disease.

- Purchase healthy cattle directly from farm of origin.
- Minimize mixing of the animals with other animals at collection point.
- Reduce stress on the animals by transporting them in the shortest time feasible.
- Be aware that there is less disease in yearling calves than in feeder calves.
- Don't mix new cattle immediately with those already in your feedlot.
- Keep animals from different sources separate for several weeks.

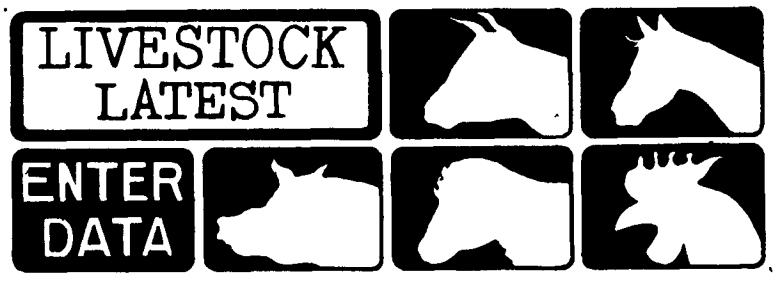
Vaccination was also covered in the evening's program. "The purpose of vaccination is to increase resistance to disease-causing organisms and toxins," he said. "It is not a solution to poor management. Don't expect a complete absence of disease when you vaccinate, but it does help prevent large losses in a herd. Techniques for giving vaccinations properly includes:

- Restrain the animals.
- Give vaccination in proper location--usually the neck for beef cattle.
- Route--intramuscular or subcutaneous (under the skin.) This affects how quickly the vaccine is absorbed.
- Dosage--give the recommended amount. If you give too little it will "wear out" too soon.
- Sterility--no dirty needles. When giving antibiotics you might be able to get away with some contamination of the needle because the antibiotic will kill it, but not with vaccinations.

The failure of a vaccination may have several causes. The animals may have been stressed, fatigued, malnourished, parasitized, or too young. The vaccine itself may have been outdated, exposed to sunlight or high temperatures, mixed with other vaccines, rehydrated too long, or given by the wrong route or in the wrong dosage.

"If you have a problem in your herd with respiratory diseases, use BVD, IBR, PI3 and BRSV routine-

(Turn to Page D3)



Topic Of Beef Producers Meeting

ly," Dr. Drake advised. Do not use IBR or BVD in pregnant animals.

Vaccines are not the answer to all herd health problems. "Pasteurella is the bacteria that kills every animal that dies of pneumonia, and I don't think the vaccine for it is any good," Drake said.

Lepto and vibrio cause abortions in cattle. "You probably won't see these diseases unless you are not watching your biosecurity and you bring in an animal that has it." Lepto can occasionally be brought into a herd by a deer.

Drake recommended getting a paper that certifies that the animals you are purchasing are free of brucellosis, TB and any recognizable symptoms of disease.

The problem of calf scours was also addressed. "Get them out of the barn if they've got scours," he advised. "Get them away from the concentration of manure and into a clean environment."

Colostrum is important because a calf is born with no immunity. "We hear a lot about AIDS patients-- a newborn calf is the same way-- it has no immunity," he said.

Respiratory disease is the number one killer of feedlot cattle. Cattle should be observed closely for 14 days after purchase. Quick treatment is important. "If an animal's temperature goes above 104°, treat it. Don't wait. Separate the sick animal from other animals because it will be spreading infectious organisms. Consult a veterinarian on drug, dosage, and evaluation. Put antibiotics in the feed and water for the other animals," Drake said.

The best treatment for the sick animal is a combination of tetracycline (5 mg per pound) given intramuscularly and oral sulfa boluses. These should be given daily for four days. If it is impossible to treat the animal daily, then it should be given a shot of LA 200, a long-acting tetracycline, at the rate of 9 mg per pound. Sustained release sulfa boluses should also be given. This treatment will last three to four days.

If a cattleman exceeds the recommended drug dosage for his animals, he is responsible to see that the drug does not enter the food supply. He must extend the withdrawal time.

"Beef producers in Pennsylvania underestimate the significance of parasites," Dr. Drake continued. "They're costing you money." Roundworms and nematodes are a problem in grazing animals. They infest the stomach, intestines and lungs. Overgrazed pasture increases the risk of parasitism. Twenty-one days after the cow ingests the parasite, she will start shedding eggs in her manure. Another animal can pick up these eggs by grazing too close to infected manure.

The parasites consume blood and migrate through the animal's organs, making her less efficient. The animal becomes anemic, emaciated, and shows poor weight gain. Heifers should be wormed when turned out to pasture and again at three and six weeks on pasture. Or, ivermectin may be given at zero and five weeks on pasture. Cows should be given invermectin in the fall, as it kills the hibernating larvae.

New Surge Dealership

NAPERVILLE, IL. — Ralph Stringer, professionally trained dairy farm equipment specialist, has announced the establishment of a Surge dealership at Mill Hall, to serve local dairymen.

"Our goal," said Stringer, "is to help dairymen do a better job of cow milking and to help them become more profitable businessmen."

Stringer has recently completed an extensive training program at the Surge Training Center, located near St. Charles, Illinois. Courses were conducted in classrooms and on-the-job. Subjects included milking system installations, preventive servicing, dairy farm planning, dairy sanitation and dealership management. Special emphasis was given to proper milking practices and the physiology of the dairy cow.

"I have also been trained to analyze, treat, and condition water," said Stringer. "This is a service needed by a growing number of rural Americans."

NPPC Picks Assistants For PRV Eradication Program

DES MOINES, IA. — Former Iowa state veterinarian Dr. Merle Lang of Cumming, Iowa, and the Livestock Conservation Institute (LCI) have been named to assist the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) in coordination of a massive ten-year program to rid the pork industry of pseudorabies. It has been estimated that PRV annually costs U.S. pork producers in excess of $20 million.

A ten-year timetable for eradication and control of the disease was approved by delegates at NPPC's 1987 annual meeting. The program has an overall price tag of $182 million, with financing to come from state and federal governments and producers. The producers share of the cost would come from testing, down-time and vaccination. Congress recently appropriated $2.4 million for a start-up of the program this year.

According to Orville K. Sweet, NPPC executive vice president, Dr. Lang will be a consultant with the chief responsibility of establishing contact with state PRV advisory committees. He will initially coordinate activities designed to encourage formation of such committees, and then will coordinate the state efforts as the program progresses. Dr. Lang may be contacted through Dr. David Meeker, NPPC's Director of Research and Education at the Council's Des Moines office (515-223-2600).

A contract has been signed with the Livestock Conservation Institute to make available the services of Neal Black for the information/education responsibilities of the PRV control and eradication program. Black is the former editor of National Hog Farmer, and was president of LCI until his semi-retirement last year. Black will work out of his home at Eagan, MN and may be contacted at 612-454-5928.

Dr. Frank Mulhern, NPPC's consultant on scientific and government affairs in Washington, DC and Dr. Meeker will handle other aspects of the PRV control and eradication program effort.

USDA Proposes Procedures For Cattle Referendum

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is proposing procedures for conducting a referendum among cattle producers and cattle and beef importers to determine whether the beef promotion program authorized by the Beef Promotion and Research Act of 1985 will be continued.

J. Patrick Boyle, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the voters will decide if current assessments funding the program -- $1 per head of domestic or imported cattle sold, and an equivalent amount assessed on imported cattle, beef, and beef products -- will continue.

The act outlines general procedures governing the referendum, one of which states that registration and voting occur on the same day at USDA's Extension Service county offices, Boyle said.

Among procedural details USDA is proposing for the referendum are the assistance of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service personnel to count ballots, determining eligibility of challenged voters, and reporting referendum results.

The secretary of agriculture will consider all comments received on the proposal before deciding to issue a final rule. AMS monitors the activities of the beef board for the secretary.

The proposed procedures were published in the Jan. 8 Federal Register. Cattle producers, importers, and other interested parties have until Feb. 8 to submit comments, in duplicate, to the Marketing Programs and Procurement Branch, Livestock and Seed Division, AMS, USDA, Rm. 2610-S, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456. More information is available from Ralph L. Tapp, Chief, Marketing Programs and Procurement Branch, AMS, USDA, telephone (202) 447-2650.

Montgomery Agent Wins Award

Nancy M. Kadwill, of Creamery, was awarded the National Association of Extension 4-H Agents Communicator Award for her Video Cassette Program entry during the 4-H Agents National Meeting November 8-12 in San Diego, California.

Ms. Kadwill, County Agent, Agriculture & Youth, won the award for the tape made to give the viewing audience a brief introduction to the 3 most common riding styles as well as what to look for in horse, rider, and equipment. Therefore, they could better enjoy themselves as a spectator at a horse show. Nancy's entry was named a state winner and went on to become a national winner in the communications program.

The Communicator Awards were initiated by the National Association of Extension 4-H Agents in 1985 to recognize members' accomplishments in presenting 4-H to the public. Coppinger and Affiliates/Majestic Associates sponsored the national award which consisted of a plaque and a cash award to attend the 4-H Agents National Professional Improvement Meeting. On the Pennsylvania level, awards and certificates were sponsored by the Lancaster Farming Newspaper.

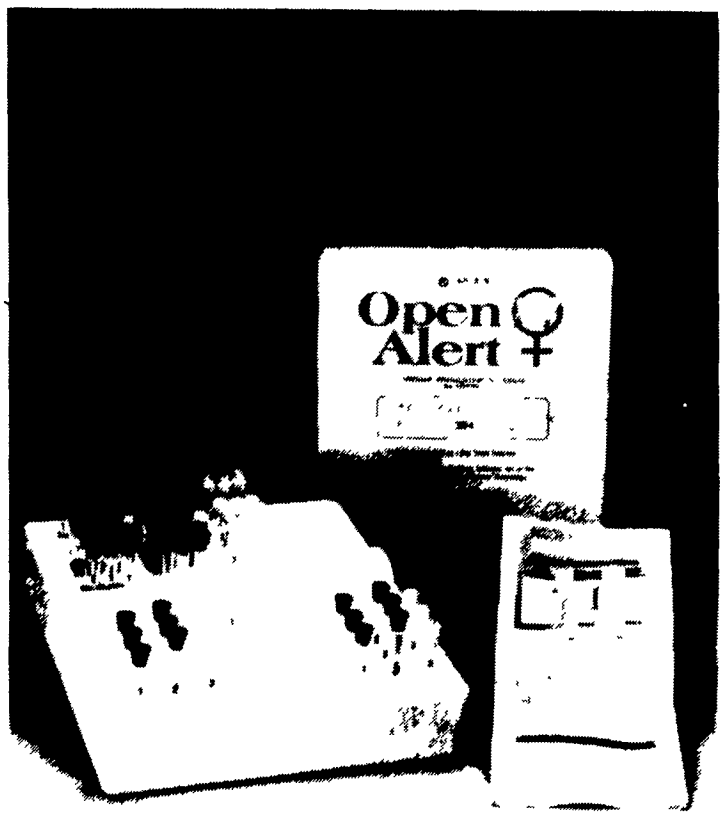
ABS Test Strip Can Detect Open Cows

DEFOREST, WI — American Breeders Service (ABS) now offers its customers a simple method of detecting open cows. Dr. Robert E. Walton, ABS president, announced that his firm has begun marketing Open Alert™ for An-Tech International of Phoenix, Ariz.

Open Alert™ employs the very latest in technology to test the reproductive status of lactating cows by measuring progesterone levels in their milk. Clinical studies have shown that such testing can be more than 94% effective in detecting open cows 21-24 days after breeding.

When making the announcement, Walton pointed out that Open Alert™ is the first real "cow-side" test of its kind specifically designed to be used by a dairyman in his barn or milking parlor. The procedure is not unlike a litmus test. The test strip (Alert-Stik) is dipped in a sample of the cow's milk, rinsed and then dipped in a developer. The level of progesterone in the milk causes a color change on the chemically treated Alert Stik, indicating whether or not the cow is open. Said Walton, "it's so simple it can be performed by children in just minutes."

Open Alert™ is a patented bovine progesterone assay test that was developed by Quidel of LaJolla, Calif. It is being marketed throughout the United States by ABS Representatives or by direct contact with American Breeders Service Headquarters at P.O. Box 459, DeForest, WI 53532, (608) 846-3721. It is available in Progesterone Assay Kits suitable for testing 12 or 24 cows.



Open Alert, a patented bovine progesterone assay test, can determine the reproductive status of lactating cows by measuring progesterone levels in their milk.

BUSINESS NEWS...

PDPP Votes More Money To Dairy Councils

Dairy councils serving western, northern and eastern Pennsylvania have received a New Year's present from the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

In October, at the first meeting of the new fiscal year, the Commodity Marketing Board had voted to continue $125,000 in funding to the three councils.

But at the January meeting of PDPP's Commodity Marketing Board the councils had more to offer . . . an expanded program of dairy nutritional education, more personnel and an increase in contacts and services. The new price tag — $211,200.

After a hard look at the new proposals, Board Chairman Jim Harteis and the executive committee found the new figure at "an appropriate level" for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, or about 10% of the total budget for the current year.

The board agreed. ADA & Dairy Council of Federal Order 2 saw its appropriation increase from $53,500 to $63,500. Dairy Council, Inc. of Federal Order went from $55,000 to $102,000. The Dairy and Nutrition Council in Federal Order 36 moved up from $17,000 to $45,700.

In other business, board members:

* Voted $195,000 for White Lite TV and radio advertising for the January-March period, and $51,000 for "Make-it Milk" advertising.

* Dropped advertising programs with the Pittsburgh Pirates baseball club after two years and its Harrisburg Senators farm team after one.

* Saw the finished version of PDPP's film documentary, "The Land of Milk and Honey," and ordered copies for the use of local promotion committees, dairy princess program, schools, farm and civic groups, film libraries and Public TV.

* Approved plans by Promotion Chairman Janet Burkholder to supply milk to the Senior Citizens Corral Monday at Farm Show Week.

* Learned from Marketing Specialist Donna Verner that 236 tickets to Hershey Bear hockey games will be given away by five Central Pennsylvania radio stations in a new White Lite promotion. The tickets were donated by the hockey club as part of an advertising package.

John Deere To Market Yetter Product

PEORIA, IL — Through a non-exclusive joint marketing agreement with Yetter Manufacturing Co., Colchester, Illinois, Deere & Company has approved the Yetter 6600 Series Coulter Cart as allied equipment for John Deere 515 and 520 Integral Grain Drills for no-till planting of small grains and soybeans.

The Coulter Carts will be marketed nationally under the Yetter name by John Deere dealers.

The Yetter Coulter Cart automatically levels the attached drill or other implement to match changing field conditions - on the go - from the tractor seat. This is a benefit no other coulter cart on the market can offer. In addition, coulter penetration, depth gauging, opener tracking, and all-around versatility are unmatched in the industry, Yetter said.

According to Yetter, this combination gives John Deere Integral Drills exceptional no-till or mini-till capability while providing Deere dealers with a tool that has proven its worth when used in conjunction with planters, subsoilers and other implements.

Case IH Introduces New Two-Wheel Drive Magnum Tractors

RACINE, WISC. — Case IH introduces the all-new 7100 Series tractors, called the Magnum line, featuring a totally new engine, transmission and cab that will set future industry standards for performance, efficiency and operator comfort.

The Magnum line of two-wheel-drive tractors in the 130 to 195 PTO horsepower (hp) range represents a totally new approach to tractor design and manufacturing, inspired by the 1985 merger of J I Case and International Harvester.

The Magnum line includes the Model 7110 (130 PTO hp), the Model 7120 (150 PTO hp), the Model 7130 (170 PTO hp) and the Model 7140 (195 PTO hp). A mechanical-front-drive (MFD) option is available on all models. Key features include: a large displacement, 505-cubic-inch turbocharged engine with high torque rise for maximum power, efficiency and long life; an 18-speed full powershift transmission and optional six-speed "powershift creeper" for a total of 24 speeds — providing more power shifts than any other tractor in the industry; a new cab — with more than 47 square feet of glass for unsurpassed visibility — that will also set new standards of comfort.

All Magnum tractors incorporate the computer-aided designed and manufactured Family II 6T-830 turbocharged diesel engine. The Model 7140 is also aftercooled.

The water-cooled, 505-cubic-inch engine delivers more power at lower rpm, resulting in longer and cooler operation at maximum horsepower and greater fuel economy. Additionally, the engine's high-torque rise and excellent lugging ability allow smooth and efficient operation regardless of soil condition or changing terrain.

The new Family II design uses fewer parts than comparable engines and has a high degree of parts commonality with Family I engines found in other Case IH tractors.

Magnum tractors have a controlled air-flow system that features a totally enclosed engine compartment to keep out dirt and debris. A tilt hood, unique service door and easily removable panels provide instant access to the entire engine.

Other features that further improve operating and maintenance efficiencies include: an exclusive Poly-Vee drive belt that does the work of muluple belts in standard engines, resulting in longer belt life and reduced servicing requirements; an automatic belt tensioner to further increase belt life, improve efficiency and minimize adjustments; a viscous fan drive on Models 7120, 7130 and 7140 for improved fuel economy and engine efficiency; built-in piston oil cooling and an in-block water pump to enhance efficiency and extend engine life; and a new heavy-duty, 110-amp alternator for additional electrical capacity to provide auxiliary power for all farming requirements.

New Cab

A new cab incorporates the latest in ergonomic design. With more than 47 square feet of glass, the cab provides unparalleled visibility for field operations. Case IH designed the exhaust stack to be completely out of view from the driver's seat, providing a panoramic view of the field.

The cab features more head and shoulder room than comparable tractors. A right-hand console with carefully placed tractor controls makes operation easy and efficient. A full-feature seat with both left and right swivel and a wide, adjustable left-hand armrest further contribute to operator comfort.

To maximize tractor performance and efficiency, Magnum tractors offer the most advanced monitoring and instrumentation system in the industry — the Case IH Intelligence Center II, the second generation of the current Case IH Intelligence Center.

This sophisticated system can monitor and display several functions simultaneously, such as engine rpm, wheel slip and ground speed. The system also incorporates an optional radar true ground speed sensor — a popular option on previous Case IH tractor models.

An additional Magnum tractor feature is a programmable service indicator that enhances tractor maintenance monitoring.

Case IH has introduced the all-new 7100 Series tractors, called the Magnum line, featuring a totally new engine, transmission and cab. The Magnum line of two-wheel-drive tractors in the 130 to 195 PTO horsepower range represents a totally new approach to tractor design and manufacturing, inspired by the 1985 merger of J I Case and International Harvester.

The Need For RCMA

BY ARDEN TEWKSBURY
Pennsylvania Farmers Union

HARRISBURG — While the Pennsylvania Farmers Union and most farm organizations will continue their vigorous pursuit of attempting to correct the declining dairy prices through legislative channels; these attempts will not slow down our continued efforts to sign up independent dairy farmers into R.C.M.A.

During February and March of 1985 we brought R.C.M.A. into Pennsylvania. Certainly, if we felt the need for R.C.M.A. at that time, then the need today has been compounded many times over since that initial period.

The price of fluid milk (Class I) in January 1985 for the New York market was $14.97. This was the highest level the price ever reached. The current January Class I price is $13.89, this is $1.08 lower than the 1985 price. The recent 50¢ cut in the milk support price will mean a possible Class I price by the Spring of 1988 around $12.65. Isn't it time dairy farmers realize we can recapture some of these losses through R.C.M.A.

The Last Call — 1,200 Independent Dairy Farmers?

For three years farm organizations, state and county steering committees, R.C.M.A. personnel, special coordinators, extension people and many others have been banging on doors in an attempt to bring the needed independent dairy farmers into the fold.

While many of the efforts have met with success, R.C.M.A. still needs at least 1,200 more of the independent dairy farmers signed up to do the proper job. R.C.M.A. is in the process of putting together a special task force which will be geared toward signing up the remaining independents. This task force will encourage local dairymen to work toward signing up the remaining milk producers.

Many people are claiming this may be our last chance to have a real successful pricing mechanism established by the dairy farmer. For the first time every dairy farmer will have a real say in their milk price. We could have a substantial increase in our say if we can bring the remaining dairymen into R.C.M.A. Are we as dairymen going to let this opportunity escape us? Why are we willing to let our milk prices slip to the 1978 level, when no other sector of our economy would allow this to happen? What happens in 1989 if the milk support price falls to $10.10 per cwt.?

Over and over again we hear the statement made, it's so hard to start up a dairy farm today! Should you and I be proud of that statement? Isn't it time we change the thinking of the people who allow this to happen?

What Can We Do?

1. Every dairy farmer that is a member of R.C.M.A. should contact one of the farm organizations (PFU, Grange, PFA) and find out how you can help the special task force.

2. If you are an independent dairy farmer who has chosen not to become an R.C.M.A. member, then we cordially ask you to do so right away, not only can you improve your income, but you can aide your fellow dairymen at the same time.

3. Independent dairy farmers shipping milk to private handlers should no longer be intimidated by the handlers, nor should they listen to special arrangements offered by some of the handlers.

R.C.M.A.'s Prices

The Board of Directors of R.C.M.A. has continued to establish the Class I price in the New York market at $14.45 per cwt. through the Winter of 1988. I would anticipate this same price for the Spring months. By maintaining the $14.45 price during April, May and June could mean a R.C.M.A. Class I premium of at least $1.65 per cwt. This is why it is so important that the remaining independents are signed into R.C.M.A.

If we are able to increase the percentage of Class I milk that premiums can be collected on up to at least 80%, then dairy farmers could receive R.C.M.A. premium of at least 50¢ per cwt. by the Summer of 1988. However, this amount of premium will not be attainable without the remaining independent dairymen.

As a dairy farmer I appreciate the voluntary premiums paid to me by my milk handler, Durling Farms of Whitehouse, New Jersey. Since September of 1987 this premium has reached 50¢ per cwt. Durling Farms owners have had at least 25 phone conversations with me on R.C.M.A. They also have cooperated in every way with R.C.M.A.

While I and other producers appreciate these premiums, we also know they are being paid primarily as a result of the R.C.M.A. program.

During the early Fall months of 1987 many New York City milk handlers and distributors raised the price of milk to consumers nearly 15¢ a gallon. Only 3¢ a gallon could be attributed to the R.C.M.A. price. Naturally this price gouging is under investigation by the Attorney General's office in New York state.

However, one thing is clear, there is plenty of room in the market place for increases in milk prices paid to dairy farmers. What we have to do is obtain our fair share and the only people that can do this is the dairy farmers themselves! The success of the current efforts of the special task force to sign the remaining independents into R.C.M.A. will go a long way in determining the fate of thousands of dairy farmers.

It is up to the present R.C.M.A. members to help the task force complete their efforts. This is possibly a now or never situation. This time around we hope every one will get behind these efforts.

Garden Spot FFA Show Cleaning Up The Bay Begins In The Susquehanna Watershed

BY PAT PURCELL

NEW HOLLAND — Making a difference in the Chesapeake Bay begins here in Pennsylvania because fifty percent of the fresh water in the bay comes from the Susquehanna River. To set an example for the rest of Pennsylvania to follow, FFA members of the Garden Spot Grassland Chapter are determined to make a difference in the bay's plight by focusing on a stream in their backyard.

The Black Creek which runs through the farm owned by Harold and Tom Wentzel of New Holland, is the site of Grassland's Building Our American Communities project. This project is partially funded through the new internship program established by the Chesapeake Bay Foundation designed to initiate research throughout the Susquehanna River area.

The Garden Spot FFA members are working in cooperation with the Wentzels and have secured funding from other agencies including the Lancaster County Conservation District, Pennsylvania Fish and Game Commissions, the Bureau of Forestry and the Northeastern Lancaster County Rod and Gun Club. Agents of these groups are also providing technical and financial assistance.

The goal of the BOAC project is to reduce stream bank erosion by restricting the access of the cattle to the stream. As a result this will reduce the nitrate level and sedimentation in Black Creek improving the water quality for the cattle, as well as improving the habitat for aquatic life and wildlife.

"Farmers make their living off the land the same as fishermen make their living off the water. It's the same thing. Farmers know how important this is. We've got to make sure we clean up the Bay," explained Jeff Witwer, Grassland Project Co-Chairman.

The idea to clean-up Black Creek surfaced during a leadership training weekend camp-out in September. Chapter officers enthusiastically set goals after a presentation on goal setting by Dr. John Gould, assistant superintendent of ELCSD.

Before the weekend was over, chapter officers worked with Donald Robinson, Adult Farmer instructor in ELCSD and FFA Advisors Clifford Day, Daryl Schafer and Robert Lauffer to devise a plan of action.

According to BOAC Co-chairman Phil Horning, "We decided to use Black Creek for a couple of reasons. First of all it is close enough to the school to make it feasible to study on a weekly basis. Also the entire stream from headwaters to its entry into the Muddy Creek is located within our school district. We feel that eventually through our BOAC efforts we can see a real difference in the overall water quality."

The Grassland FFA group plans to reduce stream bank erosion by limiting cattle to one crossing with the use of high-tensile fencing. Many of the streams which are on farms have banks which are extremely undercut and highly susceptible to trampling by the cows.

"We see a tremendous amount of erosion when cattle tramp on the top of these undercut stream banks," said Lauffer, Grassland FFA Advisor.

Students have been monitoring the water quality since fall for ph levels; dissolved oxygen, nitrate levels, phosphate levels, and turbidty and water temperature. As the project progresses the students findings will be confirmed by an independant lab.

"Most farmers know the value of cutting down on soil erosion. They can see the soil loss per acre and the know what that does to the net returns of the farm and they would be happy to have the work done, but the farmer pays the bill. Wentzel has been very cooperative and is happy to have the FFA do something so valuable," explained Lauffer.

Harold and Tom welcome the work of the FFA members and have confidence in their ability to improve the creek. The Wentzel's have since 1960 implemented soil conservation practices and have been good stewards of the their farm land. In the near future, according to Tom, the Wentzels will install a manrue storage tank, as soon as the red tape is completed.

"We've got the information on the manure storage tank. We are concerned about nitrates and we need to cut down on our"fertilizer costs, too. This way we'll be able to spread it on right before we plow," said Tom.

Phil Horning (center) Co-Chairman of the Building Our American Communities Project show farm owners Harold (left) and Tom Wentzel (right), the new route planned for the portion of Black Creek in their pasture and where the streamcrossing will be located.

"We won't have to haul manure in the winter time, but most of all I believe it will reduce the amount of fertilizer we will have to buy," added Harold.

Some Earth Moving Experience

Come spring, the students will undertake an earth moving project, literally. Their plan is to reroute the creek to correct a situation caused several years ago. Apparently when the bridge on Black Creek was installed, the excavation crew destroyed an island in the creek and the course of the creek was changed. Since then the creek has gradually, but persistently eaten away at the Wentzels' pasture and the route has formed a loop.

"We want to change the big bend and go straight and cut off the loop. This will increase the flow of the water and the overall quality of the water will improve because the water will be moving faster," explained Horning, BOAC Co-chairman.

The Wentzels will be giving up some pasture for wildlife habitat, but will getting back some pasture from the rerouting of the stream.

BOAC Committee members are responsible for coordinating the various agencies and for planning and scheduling the project work. The committee plans to include some wildlife habitat improvement into the plan. A buffer strip along the stream banks would keep a lot of the sediments out and this could be planted in some evergreens and small shrubs to benefit wildlife.

The first phase of the project is of an educational nature. Students in the second and third year environmental agriculture classes have been monitoring water quality in Black Creek at seven locations as part of their curriculum. Also, as a by-product of the project, students are learning a lot about career possibilities by working with many of the state and local agencies.

To acquire a better understanding of their goal for their BOAC project, students participated in field-study trips. One of these was a day-long canoe trip in September on the Conestoga River conducted by the Chesapeake Bay Foundation. Twenty three FFA members plus their advisor, Lauffer and Tim Breneisen, Lancaster County Conservation District Agent and Ben Zimmer, of the Dept. of Environmental Resources Bay program participated in the trip.

Mike Lindenmuth, Environmental FFA President was really enthused about the trip.

"I was in the same canoe as Mr. Zimmer and I had a chance to understand some of the problems with the Bay. The Conestoga River is the nation's worst non-point source polluted stream and we had a chance to try to analyze why and more important to try to figure out what our generation can try to do about it."

According to Witwer, the canoe trip was successful in getting all the students interested and anxious to get started on the project.

Jim Shirk, a senior in the school's ag program and a National BOAC Volunteerism award Winner said, "When we get a chance to see these problems first hand it makes our part in the solution so much more real. We all have an effect on the environment. And whether we take an active role or just kind of passively sit back, it is up to us. The instructors from Chesapeake Bay Foundation did a great job of relating the problems the Bay is facing to us. A lot of us in Lancaster County are getting tired of hearing about how it's all the farmer's fault, but they pointed out that the problem is a lot broader than that and that all of our lifestyles impact on the Bay."

Chesapeake Bay Foundation Makes Research Opportunities Available

BY PAT PURCELL

HARRISBURG — The Chesapeake Bay Foundation has been reaching out to Pennsylvanians for more than a year from its Harrisburg office to offer education on Chesapeake Bay problems and to enlist their help. Now, through $90,000 grant, the CBF office is able to fund research projects in the Susquehanna River for students through their new internship program.

"Fifty percent of the fresh water that enters the bay comes from the Susquehanna River. Ninety percent of the fresh water in the upper bay comes from Pennsylvania - and that is the area of the bay that is worse off," said Dan Rourke, Intern Coordinator for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Harrisburg Office.

Rourke is a Penn State graduate with a B.S. in Agricultural Education and a former high school ag teacher.

"Our priority is to clean-up the area around the Susquehanna River Basin which will eventually lead to cleaning up the Bay. Monitoring and research are essential to reaching that goal."

Lancaster County Receives Funding

Lancaster County has already secured funds for a stream improvement project being conducted by the Garden Spot High School FFA Environmental Program, the Grassland FFA. Approximately 100 FFA members are monitoring a small creek in the northeastern portion of the county, Black Creek, on the farm of Harold and Tom Wentzel.

The monitoring has been in progress for several months to determine the condition of the creek before improvements are implemented on the tributary and adjacent agricultural land. The improvements will include fencing in bordering pastureland and creating a limited use access for the cattle. Several other state, federal and county agencies are also supplying technical, monetary and material support.

This is the first studies program established in Lancaster County and also the only high school project in the state. The internship program is open primarily to college juniors and seniors in a variety of fields located at colleges in the Susquehanna River Basin. Students must submit project proposals to Rourke. Interns will receive a stipend and up to 10 credits depending upon the college's requirements.

"It's not all the fault of the farmer. We have one intern researching local municipal land use policies. We also have two seniors at Dickinson evaluating land use patterns and their impact. There are many areas in which research is needed.We (CBF) have research priorities established. Students may select projects we have already outlined or submit proposals," said Rourke. "In Lancaster County the residential growth being experienced has outraced the municipal policies for sewage treatment plants for developments. We need to know how that will impact on the environment," explained Rourke.

Several projects are scheduled for spring:

——Analysis of Conodoquinet Creek and its contribution to the Chesapeake Bay's problems, Dickinson College. The project will focus on the evolution of land use paterns in the Conodoquinet basin to see how they affected changes in the creek's water quality along and a review of current land-use will allow the class to better understand the tributary's contribution to the Bay's demise.

——Landfill Monitoring, York College senior, Tom Stoner in the Biology department will conduct a chemical analysis of surface and groundwater near landfilld in Adams County.

——Land-use Planning Inventory, Shippensburg University Graduate student, Joseph Hollinger, in Geo-Environmental Studies. Hollinger plans to evaluate the different land-use planning instruments available to public planners when creating policy pertaining to water quality. This inventory could be helpful in creating model ordinances, educating the public about local planning and identifying municipalities that could use assistance.

——Water Quality Monitoring On Swatara Creek, Penn State University, Harrisburg campus. A student in the environmental pollution control program will conduct a chemical analysis of water collected at three monitoring stations on the Swatara Creek. The project will be used to determine nutrient trends in the Swatara Creek.

——Fertilizer Response Trials, Richard Watts. The purpose of this study is to determine the yield response of corn to various levels of inorganic fertilizer, N + P, on a heavily manured, deep, well-drained Letort silt loam with a 3 to 8 percent slope. Results will aid livestock farmers in making better fertilizer decisions and reduce the possibility of nutrients percolatinng into the groundwater.

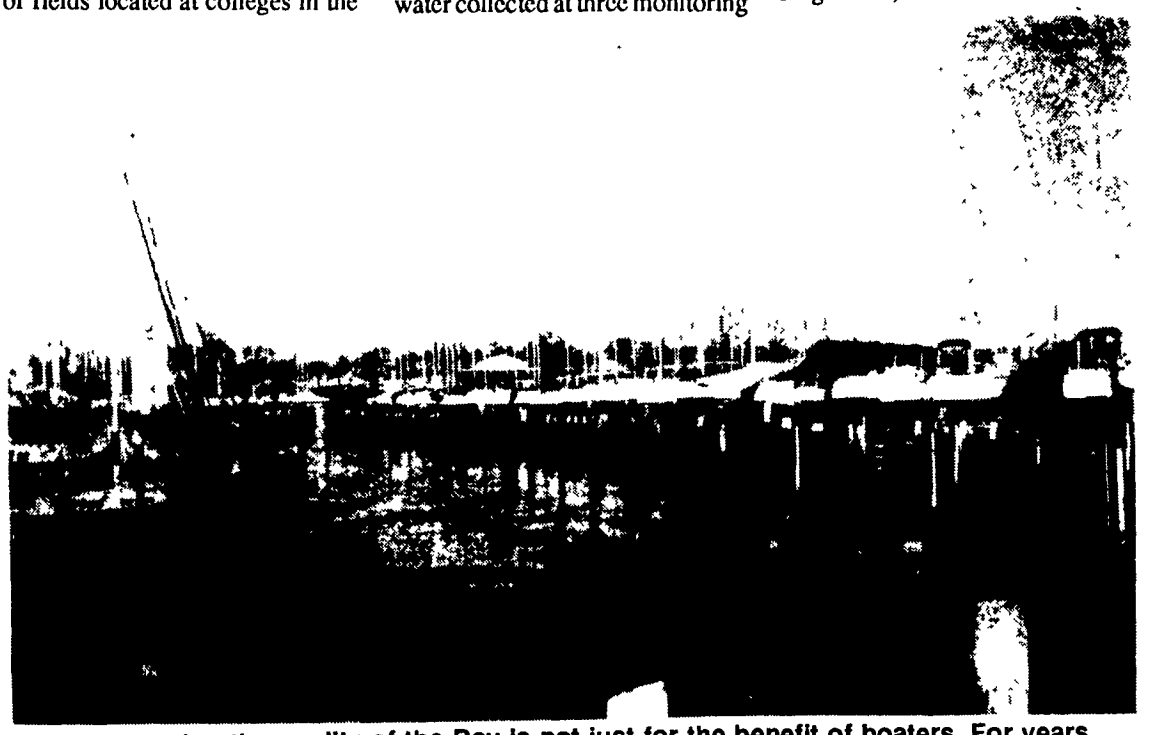
"It offers an educational experience through a hands-on approach with the goal to clean up the Bay. It is an educational tool allowing Pennsylvania colleges and high schools to get more involved and to increase everyone's awareness level, while providing us with a vast resource of academic research," explained Rourke.

"This research can identify problem areas locally. Improving water quality locally, increasing wildlife habitat and helping farmers to keep fertilizer and nutrients on their fields while it helps all the counties and helps the Bay," explained Rourke.

The foundation has added a part-time agronomist to its Harrisburg office, Richard Watts. Watts has a Masters degree in Agronomy from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University and most recently worked for an agribusiness firm in south central Pennsylvania. Watts will be working with farmers to reduce nutrient leeching and making better use of nutrients in manure.

Contact Dan Rourke for more information on the intern programs at: Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Inc., 412 North 2nd Street, Harrisburg, Pa. 17101. Or call 717-234-5550.

Cleaning up the Chesapeake Bay begins with the Susquehanna River Watershed which contributes 50 percent of the freshwater to the Bay.



Protecting the quality of the Bay is not just for the benefit of boaters. For years fishermen have depended on the Bay to earn their livelihood. Destroying the Bay means destroying the only way they know to make a living in many cases.

Lancaster County Waterways Have A Plight Of Their Own

BY PAT PURCELL

NEW HOLLAND — The Chesapeake Bay is not alone in its fight. Lancaster County has a plight of its own to conquer and control. High nitrate levels plague much of the area's water supply. There will be no more water and what we have must be preserved and protected.

Being one of the top agriculuturral producing counties in the nation it is only logical that Lancaster County would have a high rate of livestock per acre and consequently Lancaster County is running out of land on which to dispose of the resulting nutrients.

A drive down any country road is proof that farmers are not the only residents in the county who are contributing to the less than desirable water quality. Residential development appears to be raging unchecked throughout the entire county. This means not only less land available and an even higher ratio of livestock to acres, but also more building which causes more soil disturbance and subjects this soil to erosion. With more building comes more paved surfaces which prevents the natural run-off and draining necessary to filter the water. And, finally, more homes means more families and just more sewage demanding a means of disposal.

Farmers are partners in this problem and they can make a difference. Nitrates leeching through the soil and in the run-off find their way into the ground water and the streams, but farmers can make some small changes in their nutrient management practices to result in some big changes in water quality.

Don Robinson of the Eastern Lancaster County Adult Farmer Program has several recommendations for farmers and all it requires is a change of attitude for some.

I am only one, but I am one. I cannot do everything, but I can do something.
What I can do, I should do and, with the help of God, I will do!

——Everett Hale.

"The first step a farmer can take to putting nutrient management into practice is to have an open mind and a positive attitude," said Robinson. "It won't cost him anything to recognize there is a problem and that he has some control over it,"said Robinson.

"The farmer must learn on his own farm how many nutrients are needed with the yield goals and rotations that he is using."

What Does This Soil Need

In determing what the nutrient needs of the farm are there are several things the farmer needs to do, according to Robinson.

——1. A farmer must experiment on his farm and this may take several years.

——2. He must learn to make realistic yield goals and not goals established for him by an anxious fertilizer dealer who sells fertilizer based on that goal, warns Robinson. Although there may be a possibility to produce 180 bushels per acre the management ability of that farmer may not permit those yields.

"When nutrients are applied for those unrealistic yield goals those added nutrients not absorbed will contribute to leeching and run-off," stated Robinson.

The farmer must strive for rea-

These future farmers are working hard to educate the public about the Bay's problems. They constructed a float entitled, "This detroys the Chesapeake Bay . . .

"Farmers make their living off the land the same as fishermen make their living off the water. It's the same thing. Farmers know how important this is. We've got to make sure we clean-up the Bay," and this can save it." The float consisted of two wagons. The first wagon showed some of the practices that have been harming the Bay.

—— Jeff Witwer, BOAC Project Co-Chairman.

"We wanted to let people see that there are a lot of factors that contribute to the problem — we depicted surface run-off from over fertilization, siltation and erosion, improper disposal of household wastes, point and non-point source pollution, unlimited access to stream banks of cattle, all of these add up to a negative effect." Explained Janetta Shirk float co-chairman.

Kristin Chupp, float co-chairman, summed up the purpose of the second wagon. "We tried to show the public what some of the possible solutions might include such as -things like recycling wastes, fencing along streams to limit livestock access, proper pollution controls at factories and industrial sites, applying the right amount of fertulizer after testing the soil. We also tried to point out that some of these solutions cost money, but what we tried to stress was that there is a price we have to pay for clean water and we think the benefits are worth the costs."

"I'm really excited about the potential of this on-going BOAC Project" said FFA Advisor Lauffer. The members are really responding and cooperating. There's a lot of enthusiasm and concern. The Conestoga River trip put a lot of fun into the project but it also gave us all a better understanding of what's really happening. We tested water samples of the upstream and downstream sides of waste water treatment facilities, below where storm water drains emptied in, in wooded acres, open fields, etc. and also talked a lot about the history of the river and man's impact on it."

Plans are underway to have a follow-up trip to the Bay itself next spring.

Last year the BOAC students coordinated a project in cooperation with the Bureau of Forestry and the Lancaster County Conservation District to study the economic feasibility of spraying liquid manure onto woodlands.

Witwer explained the project, "Most of our farmland is supersaturated with nutrients, especially nitrogen, but a lot of our surrounding woodlands are on sites that are nitrogen poor. We are trying to kill two birds with one stone; we've got to do something with this excess manure and our woodlands are deficient in nutrients. The big thing that is being closely monitored is if it can be done without any ill-effects on groundwater. That's a big problem around here because of the limestone soils. We will be continuing this project for the next three to five years before we can really draw any conclusions."

The Environmental FFA group has been working to improve streams for the past 15 or more years. Students have worked in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Fish Commision to improve fish habitat by designed and constructing stream improvements. Their projects have included bank stabilization by planting trees, rock and log rip-rapping, deflectors, gabions, jack dams, etc. Many of these projects have baen completed at Black Creek, the focus of this year's project.

"When we get a chance to see these problems first hand it makes our part in the solution so much more real. We all have an effect on the environment. And whether we take an active role or just kind of passively sit back, it is up to us. The instructors from the Chesepeake Bay Foundation did a great job of relating the problems the Bay is facing to us. A lot of us in Lancaster County are getting tired of hearing about how its all the farmers' fault, but they pointed out that the problem is a lot broader than that and that all of our lifestyles impact on the Bay."

——Jim Shirk, National BOAC Volunteerism award winner

Clifford Horning (standing) from the Northeastern Lancaster County Rod and Gun Club examines the water quality readings FFA members are gathering on an area of Black Creek which is extremely dark and murky.

listic goals. If a farmer has consistently achieved 160 bushels of corn and never 180, or has achieved 5 tons of hay/acre and never 8 tons then he should strive for the one within reach. The farmer buys all that fertilizer and does not produce that goal and he is overapplying nutrients.

——3. He must make an accurate yield check.

"It takes work, but it doesn't cost him anything and it is important he does it and not a seed corn dealer or fertilizer dealer," said Robinson.

——4. Farmers need to measure response of their crops to added nutrients. That might be difficult for farmers to do themselves. They can get help from an extension agent or from the Adult Farmer Program. When the fertilizer is spread it is simple to make the adjustments to make a path 30-40 ft. wide.

"You must clearly define sections which have no added nutrients, then sections with an additional 50 lbs., 100 lbs., and 150 lbs. to see if the added yield paid for the added fertilizer," explains Robinson. "Or if the added yield removed as much of the nutrients as you thought it would.

"Farmers continue to apply 100 to 150 lbs. of additional fertilizer and yet in almost every case we have done that, we have rarely gotten a yield increase. You have to ask yourself where does that extra 100 lbs. go that I put on. It goes right down into the water," added Robinson.

——5. The farmer should keep field records or field maps and use them. These must show the results of soil tests, where they were done, when they were done, the readings and show what the nutrient needs are for specific areas.

Farmers need these field records anyway to record pesticide application. It's the law. Records are especially needed when using restricted pesticides.

"Use your records to spread the manure where it is needed the most. This is the only way you'll know how to spread manure. This requires soil testing," said Robinson.

Frequency of Soil Testing

The frequency of soil testing depends on rotation. If corn is grown year after year, soil testing done every four or five years is adequate unless the manure management pattern has been drastically changed.

If corn and hay are rotated every four years, soil testing the last year in corn should be done before hay is planted to establish the ph level and spread lime accordingly for the needs of the hay.

Hay will draw out all the excess potash, but hay will add nitrogen making it an excellent rotation crop. In an eight year span of rotating corn and hay Robinson recommends three soil tests.

The Conservation Plan

——6. Implement a conservation plan. Having one is not enough. It must be implemented. Do no file it in a cabinet.

A conservation plan consists of recommendations from the Soil Conservation Service. They (SCS) will take ariel photographs of the farm, measure length of slopes, soil types, gullies, stream banks eroded, wet areas and specify other erosion problems,.

The plan will take into consideration the farmers crop rotation plan, livestock, cropping needs and the farmers management desires and try to formulate a conservation plan . The recommendations may be as simple as changing the direction of plowing or building cropland terraces, tile outlet terraces, or initiate no-till farming methods. It does not cost a thing to get a conservation plan done. Terraces can be staked out by the SCS, however if any earth moving is involved the would be a cost to the farmer for excavation.

Cost-Sharing Funds

In cost sharing plans government agencies may pay up to 75 percent. Through the Chesapeake Bay Foundation funds are set aside specifically for farmers and also through the Rural Clean Water Program, therefore one farmer does not have to compete with the other farmers for it every year.

There is a certain amount of funds available through a prgram called Ag Conservation Program (ACP) which is administered through the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service. These funds are assigned to the county for individual practices. The farmer does not have to contract for the entire conservation plan. By contacting the ASCS the farmer can be put on a list which is prioritized and the farmer will not have to pay the entire bill.

Under the Rural Clean Water Program or the Chesapeake Bay Project the whole farm must be under contract and generally the farmer must complete the entire plan or he does not get any money. All the RCWP and the CBP are Long Term Agreements the plan spans over several years of implementation.

"A number of plain neighbors are reluctant to enter into any written agreement with the government--that's just the way they operate. But some of these folks have a conservation plan and will implement it and pay for it themselves rather than take the cost sharing funds. This is not uncommon," explained Robinson.

Farmers continue to apply 100 to 150 lbs. of additional fertilizer and yet in almost every case we have done that, we have rarely gotten a yield increase. You have to ask yourself where does that extra 100 lbs. go that I put on. I'll tell you where it goes. Into the water."

Each year Lancaster County farms lose a layer of top soil as thin as a sheet of paper. You can't see the difference said Robinson, and farmers think they do not have a problem with erosion. But what farmers are losing is something even more valuable than topsoil.

Subsoil.

"Farmers say, 'I'm not losing topsoil. I have the same amount of topsoil layer now as I did 10-20 years ago.' It may appear to be true, but what is actually occurring is that when the farmer plows each year he is taking maybe a tenth of an inch of subsoil and mixing it into his topsoil. The farmer is slowly losing his subsoil layer," explains Robinson.

The acceptable soil loss is 4 tons/acre/year. According to Robinson there are farmers losing as much as 17-18 tons of top soil/acre/year which contributes rapidly to the loss of subsoil.

"Presently we have 8" of topsoil and 18" of subsoil which is down from 24" from 30 years ago. The manure applied mixes with the topsoil, but it takes a long time to actually create top soil. It appears to be topsoil. The farmer pulls up 1/10 of the subsoil, he doesn't see that. Over the 20-30 years, he dumps more manure on the top, while he is losing 2-3 inches the topsoil appears to remain at 8" depth. Although he is losing subsoil, he keeps plowing up a little more subsoil each year. In some places we now have 12-13 " subsoil.

Yes, We Do Need Subsoil

Farmers may think they don't need subsoil, because they don't farm it. Wrong. Subsoil is very important, especially under the present conditions. During heavy rains, the water goes through the topsoil, but the subsoil holds that moisture and performs a vital function filtering nitrates so they do not quicly pass into the ground water.

"Now that the subsoil is reduced by a third or half of what it used to be, farmers have more drainage problems. The farmer no longer has that area of 24" to absorb the water like a sponge. The water passes through into the bedrock. This is especially evident on deep rooted crops like alfalfa. Lancaster County farmers don't have the depth they need to produce alfalfa well. We have a difficult time getting the alfalfa growth that many of the other counties are experiencing because of this," explained Robinson.

In that respect Lancaster County is not any different than many other counties, but soil compaction is fast becoming a critical area for Lancaster countians. With the pressures upon farmers to plant early and seed varieties enable them to do this. Farmers are now planting in mid-April. Those farmers striving for top quality hay may harvest their first cutting in early May.

"We are planting and harvesting earlier when the soils are wetter. We are using larger, heavier equipment and using them more often, and harvesting more. We are running this machinery over these fields more frequently resulting in compaction. This is our real problem now," warns Robinson.

The shallower subsoils allow deep compaction and the clay material contributes to that. Farmers, according to Robinson, are already experiencing drainage problems, poor aeration in soil, our lower alfalfa yields.

"Implement a conservation plan. Having one is not enough. It must be implemented. Do not file it away in a cabinet."

"Lots of people don't recognize this problem. One of the most limiting factors in alfalfa yields in our area today is compaction. It is just now beginning to receive some attention. Subsoils are not as deep as they used to be. And that is magnifying the problem in our area," said Robinson.

Imported Hay Nears 100 percent

This limited alfalfa yield creates another problem. Lancaster County imports from other counties almost 100 percent of its poultry and hog feed. Hay pours into the county from surrounding counties and is manufactured into nutrient rich manure.

If Lancaster County does not have the acres to produce enough feed for its livestock, it obviously does not have enough acres to dispose of and absorb the resulting nutrients. And this is intensified with the reduction in the number of farms and as farmers continue to add more livestock per acre.

On the positive side, more farmers are realizing the nutrient value in their manure and are using it instead if buying commercial fertilizer. They are finding that their yields do not suffer. Also, farmers are proving to themselves and each other that more commercial fertilizer does not produce a greater yield and is not economicaly feasible.

Manure testing kits are available from extension offices. Testing manures for the nutrient values and using it for its nutrient values is common sense. Adult Farmer Programs, extension agents, and soil conservation agents can help farmers take the first steps in harvesting the high level of nutrients in manure instead of purchasing commercial fertilizer.
